AGHARTA

THE SUBTERRANANEAN WORLD

BY RAMOND BERNARD

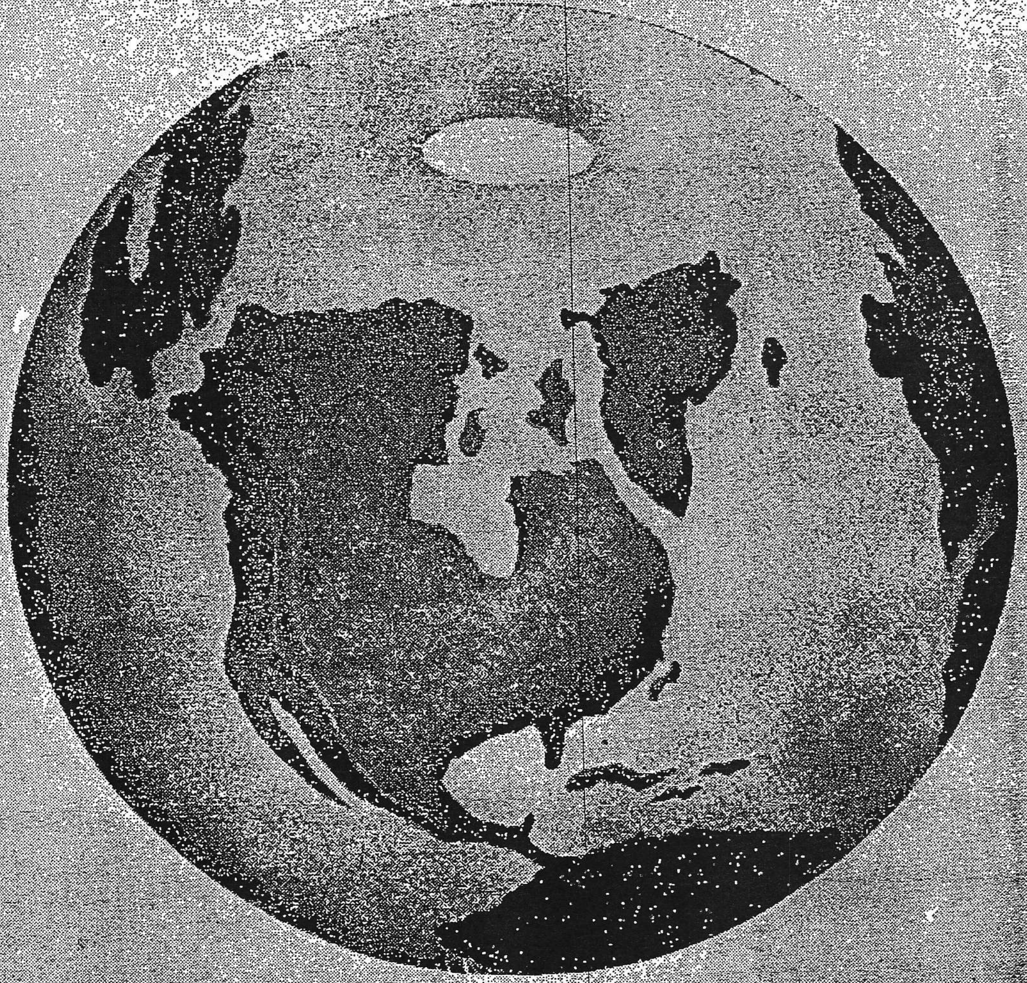
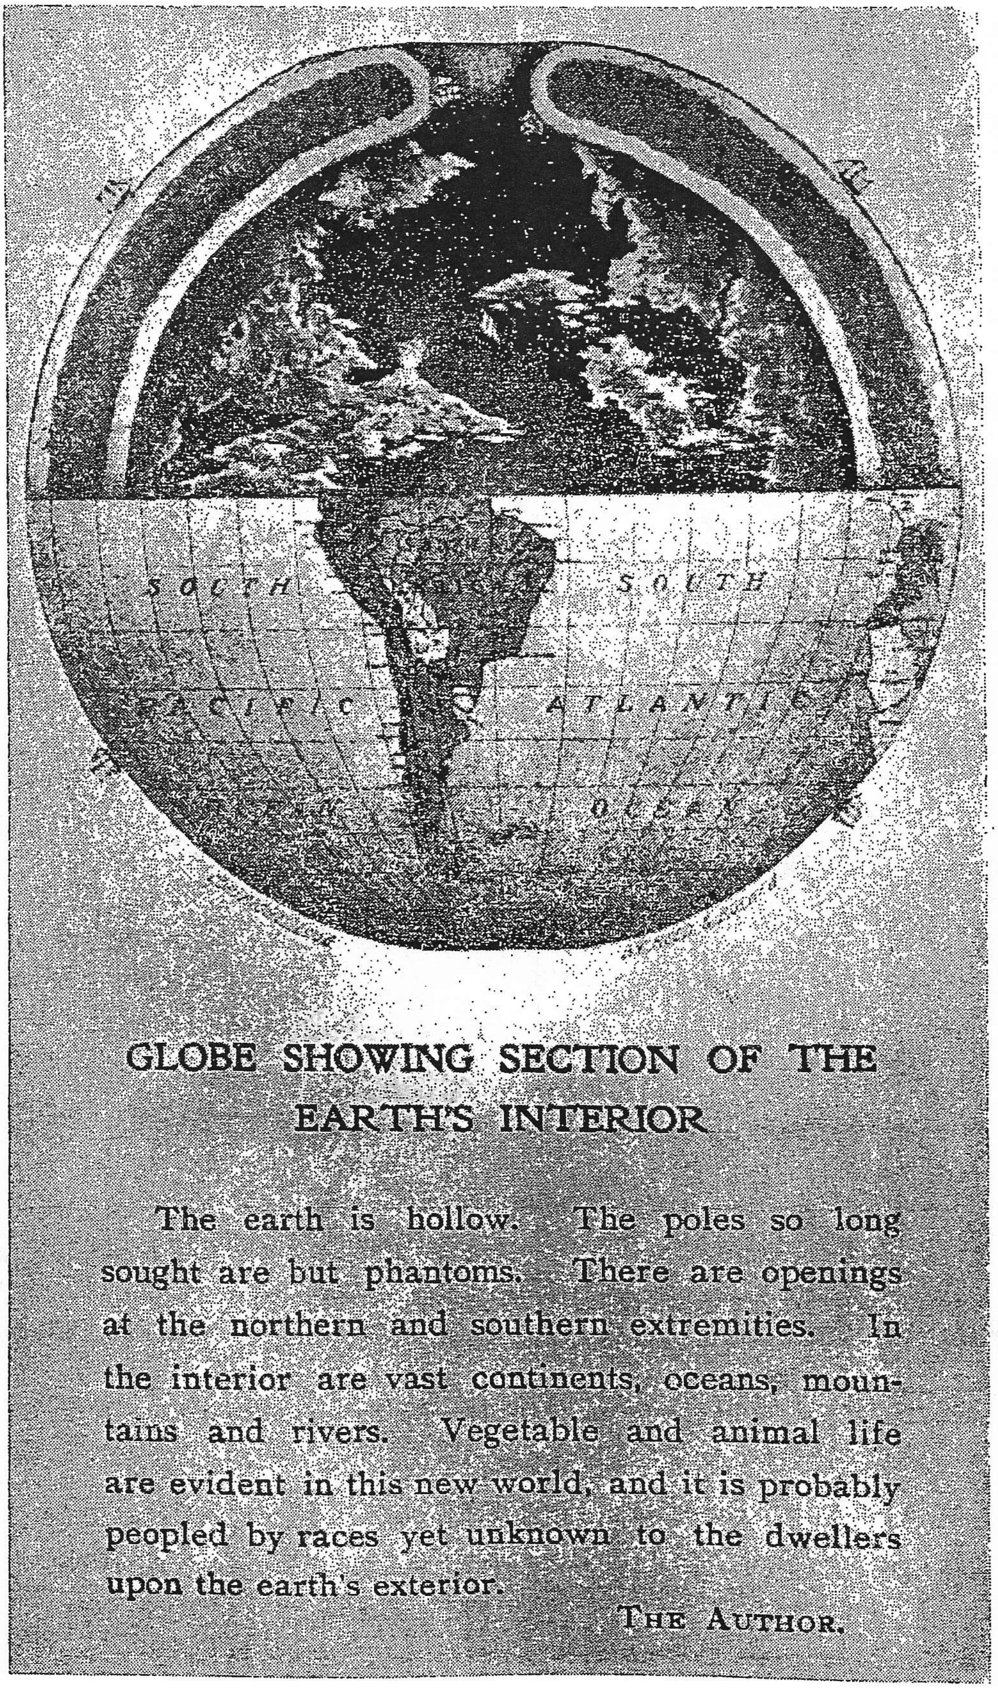
$20



The earth as it would appear if viewed from space showing the north polar opening to the planet's interior which is hollow and contains a central sun instead of an ocean of liquid lava.

Reproduced from "A Journey To The Earth's Interior—or—Have The Poles Really Been Discovered," by Marshall B. Gardner. Printed by Eugene Smith Company, Aurora, Illinois, 1920.



GLOBE SHOWING SECTION OF THE EARTH'S INTERIOR

The earth is hollow. The poles so long sought are but phantoms. There are openings at the northern and southern extremities. In the interior are vast continents, oceans, mountains and rivers. Vegetable and animal life are evident in this new world, and it is probably peopled by races yet unknown to the dwellers upon the earth's exterior.

THE AUTHOR.

Reproduced from "The Phantom Of The Poles" by William Reed, published by Walter S. Rockey Company, New York, 1906.

From "Spacecraft Digest"

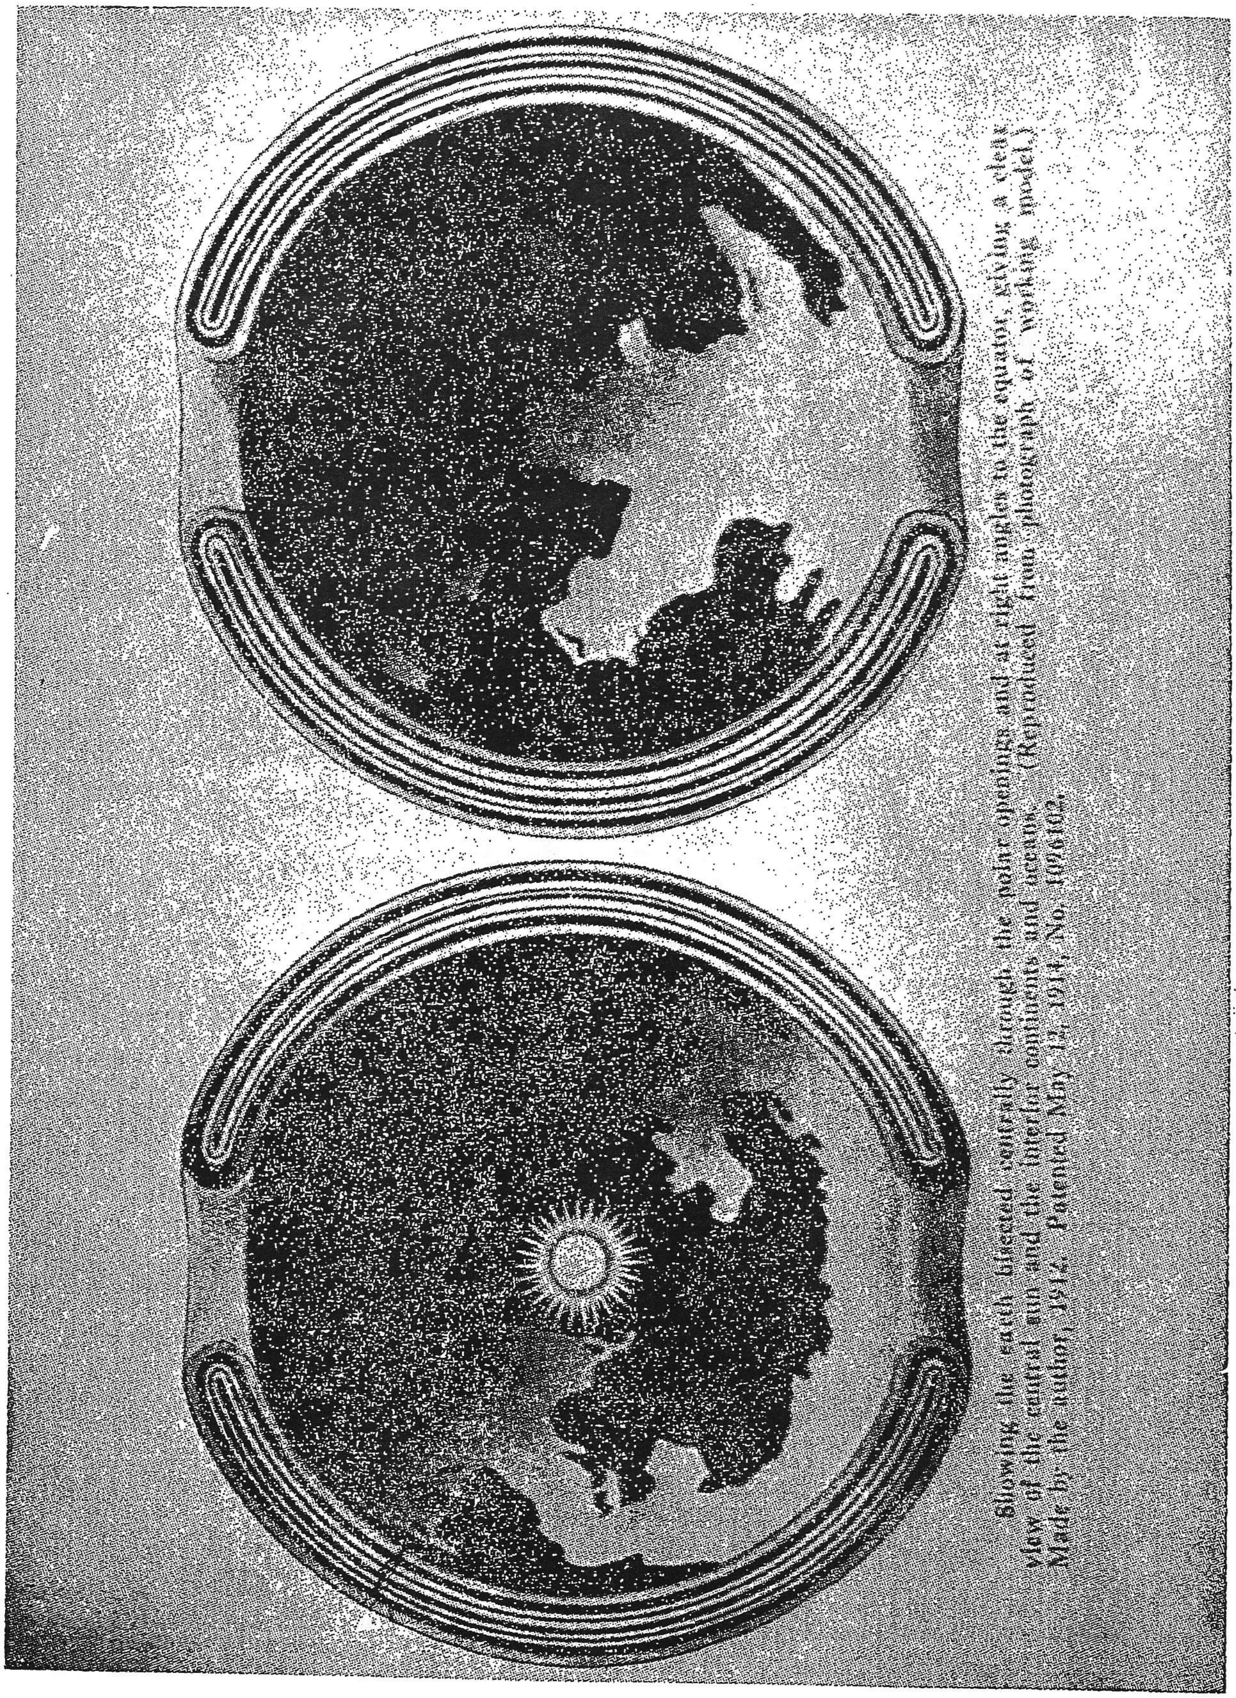
FLYING SAUCER LANDED ON SNOW-COVERED MOUNTAIN TOP AND SAUCERMAN

This saucer with convex bottom is the type commonly used for travel between the Earth's interior atmosphere in its hollow center and the external atmosphere. It is made of a special cold-resistant metal that will not crack in passing through the North Polar opening, as will the bodies of airplanes, due to extremely low temperature, magnetic and other conditions that prevail there.



Showing the earth bisected centrally through the polar openings and at right angles to the equator, giving a clear view of the central sun and the interior continents and oceans. (Reproduced from photograph of working model.) Made by the author, 1914. Patented May 12, 1914, No. 1096102.

Reproduced from "A Journey To The Earth's Interior—or—Have The Poles Really Been Discovered," by Marshall B. Gardner. Printed by Eugene Smith Company, Aurora, Illinois, 1920.

NUCLEAR AGE SAVIORS

Flying Saucers and the Subterranean World

By Dr. Raymond Bernard
(A.B., Columbia University, M.A., Ph.D.,
New York University)

Copyright 1960

Published 1960

Reprinted
By
Health Research
P. O. Box 850
Pomeroy, WA 99347
www.healthresearchbooks.com

FOREWORD

Do flying saucers come from other planets or are thet of terrestrial origin?

The belief that flying saucers come from outer space, though at present almost an article of faith among saucer enthusiasts, is lately being questioned by a number of experts, such as Ray Palmer, editor of "Flying Saucers" magazine and Gray Barker, editor of "Saucerian Review." The first one to dispute the belief in the interplanetary origin of the UFO was a Brazilian writer, O. C. Huguenin in his book "From the Subterranean World to the Sky: Flying Saucers," published in Rio de Janeiro in 1956. In this book he claimed that saucers are of terrestrial origin, though they do not come from any known nation. Huguenin claimed that they were really Atlantean aircraft which, before the sinking at Atlantis, was brought to the Subterranean World, where they remained ever since, until 1946, when the explosion of the first atomic bomb in Hiroshima led to their reappearance on the Earth's surface in great numbers for the first time, coming, as we shall see in this book, as Nuclear Age Saviors.

In the December, 1959 issue of "Flying Saucers," Ray Palmer presents evidence, based on the observations of Admiral Byrd and others, that the Earth really has a hollow interior with an opening at the North Pole, and that flying saucers come from the interior atmosphere, passing through the North Polar opening to the outer atmosphere. This he claims is the correct explanation of their solution and the solution of their mystery. Also he points out that supposed saucer trips to other planets were really trips to the interior of the earth; and that flying saucer pilots purposely kept this fact a secret and pretended to come from other planets and to travel there for important security reasons.

For once the world's governments learned that there existed in the earth's interior a land area greater than that on its surface, inhabited by a superior race of people who are the creators of the flying saucers there would not be danger of invasion but of a war that would result when the various nations all make a mad rush to acquire this new territory and claim it as their own - a war not only among themselves but a war between the Super Race inhabiting the interior of the Earth, possessing superior power of destruction (control over a form of energy beyond atomic energy), and the nations on the surface with their nuclear weapons.

This will explain the secrecy that has prevailed on this subject since time immemorial. The Super Race living inside the earth, in event of such a war, would be forced to project its "Death Rays" upon the invaders, which would cause atomic disassociation and dematerialization, causing them to be resolved into neutrons and electrons and to disappear. Since they are a peaceful race and would rather avoid having to do this, they have tried to keep their existence a secret by pretending that their flying saucers came from other planets and that they were "spacemen."

We shall see in the following pages that the Earth is really hollow and that its crust is about 800 miles thick, with an opening at the North Pole through which air and ocean water pass between its interior and exterior. Since there is also an opening at the South Pole covered by the ice of the continent of Antarctica, while there is a circulation of ocean water around the earth, between the outer and inner oceans, the South Polar opening, covered by ocean water, does not permit the passage of air. Hence the air that enters through the North Polar opening can return to the surface only through the crevices in its crust, which explains the purpose of the mysterious tunnels of South America, that serve for purposes of ventilation.

The only means of communication between the interior and exterior worlds is by means of flying saucers, which are the only vehicles capable of withstanding the peculiar magnetic conditions at the North Polar opening. Common airplanes cannot go through because of the fact that magnetic forces that exist there will wreck them. According to an informant who claims to have passed many times by flying saucer from the outer to the inner atmosphere of the Earth via the North Polar opening, the United States Government forbids any airplanes from flying over certain sections of the so-called Poles for this reason.

The basic theory of Huguenin's book referred to above is that "the hypothesis of the extra-terrestrial origin of the flying saucers does not seem acceptable" and that they really come from the hollow interior of the Earth.

While Russians and Americans are competing in a race for the conquest of space and to reach the moon and other planets first, other scientists are seeking to gain entrance to the Subterranean World, where exists far more congenial conditions for human life than those on the moon or elsewhere. Ever since William Reed, in 1906, published his epoch-making book, "The Phantom of the Poles," claiming that the Earth has a hollow interior, rather than being solid as most scientists believe, with a thickness of its crust of some 800 miles and with a diameter in its hollow center of 5,400 miles, the possibility of discovering a New World in the interior of the Earth has intrigued various scientists and thinkers. One of these was Marshall B. Gardner, who in 1920 published a book "A Journey to the Earth's Interior - of Have the Poles Really Been Discovere?", in which he amplified Reed's theory by positing the central sun at the geometrical center of the Earth.

Both Reed and Gardner claimed that the center of gravity of the Earth as a hollow sphere resides not at its hollow center but in the solid crust, so that ocean water adheres to both sides of this crust, making it possible, theoretically, to travel by ship directly toward the North Pole, which is, However, never reached, but instead one curves around and enters the inside of the Earth's crust, which some Arctic explorers and mariners claim to have done.

We have called this book "Nuclear Age Saviors" because it is our belief that flying saucers were sent up into our atmosphere following the Hiroshima atomic explosion in 1945 and during the years that followed by a race of supermen living inside the Earth for the purpose of preventing a Radioactive Catastrophe that would annihilate the human race, and which would develop step by step from this first atomic explosion, whose consequences they foresaw. The reason why this mass visitation occurred right after the explosion of the first atomic bomb in 1945 was because the inhabitants of the interior hollow of the earth, which derives its air from the outside were worried that further continuance of atomic explosions would cause a progressive radioactive poisoning of the outer atmosphere which would eventually poison the air that entered through the North Polar opening to the inner atmosphere. This would be especially true in event of a nuclear war.

It was for the purpose of self-protection and to prevent such a catastrophe that the authorities of the Subterranean World ordered their fleets of flying saucers to come to the surface and appear in our atmosphere after the Hiroshima atomic explosion for the purpose of inducing the world's governments to desist from further atomic explosions. Their efforts to bring a halt to nuclear tests, though first opposed by certain governments which refused to recognize their existence, while accepted by others which did, were finally successful when the major nations agreed to desist from further pollution of the atmosphere by atomic and hydrogen bomb tests and to hold summit conferences for purposes of disarmament and insuring permanent world peace.

Thus the Nuclear Age Saviors, who first came to us in 1945, fifteen years later achieved the results they sought and at least preserved normalcy on the Earth's surface longer than would otherwise be the case, regardless of what the future may bring. For had they not come and had they not convinced certain governments of their existence and not used them in an effort to stop further nuclear tests and insure world peace, the human race might have already committed nuclear suicide and be no more.

Chapter One

THE SUBTERRANEAN WORLD IN THE HOLLOW INTERIOR OF THE EARTH

Before Columbus discovered America, belief in the existence of a New World across the Atlantic, in the form of a western continent, was considered by Europeans as the dream of a madman. Yet today we know that all of Europe was wrong and that those who entertained this dream were right.

In the same way, there are those today who believe in the existence of the New World in the hollow interior of the Earth. This is at present as unknown to science as the American continents were to Duropeans prior to the discovery of America. Yet there is no reason why it, too, might not be discovered by a New Columbus and its existence established as a fact.

Arnoldo de Azevedo, in his "Physical Geography," wrote as follows about the mysterious world inside the Earth, about which scientists know nothing beyond a few miles in profundity, entertaining only theories, hypotheses and conjectures to cover their ignorance: "We have below our feet an immense region whose radius is 6,290 kilometers, which is completely unknown, challenging the conceit and compatence of scientists."

This statement is absolutely true. Scientists to date have penetrated only a few miles inside the earth and what lies beyond they know nothing positively about, depending entirely on conjectures, guesses and suppositions. Many of the commonly accepted theories and beliefs about the Earth's interior do not rest on any scientific basis and seem to come from the belief of the religionists in hellfire in the center of the Earth, from which came the theory that its core is a mass of fire or molten metal.

In support of this idea is the claim that the deeper one penetrates into the earth the greater the temperature. But it is a far-fetched assumption to suppose that this increase of temperature continues until one reaches the center of the Earth. There is no evidence at all to support this view. It is more probable that the increase of temperature continues until one reaches a certain depth, which is the level where volcanic lava and earthquakes originate, arising probably from radioactive activity. But after we pass through this layer of maximum heat, there is no reason why heat should not diminish the further down we go, until the temperature becomes more or less what it is on the surface.

As for the theory that the Earth was a molten mass and that at its center there is still molten iron, if this was true, and since the outer crust is about 800 miles thick, this would mean that the molten iron would be more than 6000 miles in diameter and 21,000 miles in circumference, which would be impossible, since it would require that the Earth is heavier than it really is. For its estimated weight is six sextillion tons. If it was solid all the way through, its weight would have to be much more.

The next picture in Gardner's book bears the following explanation:

"Showing the Earth bisected centrally through the Polar openings and at right angles to the equator, giving a clear view of the central sun and the interior continents and oceans. (Reproduced from a working model, made by the author in 1912).

The Earth is not a true sphere. It is flat at the Poles, or rather it begins to flatten out at the Poles. No one ever has nor ever will readh the Poles, because there aren't any. Beginning at 70 degrees to 75 degrees latitude, the earth starts to curve IN. The Pole is simply the outer rim of a magnetic circle and at this point the magnetic needle of the compass points straight in. As the Earth turns on its axis the motion is gyroscopic, like the spinning of a top. The outer gyroscopic pole is the magnetic rim of a circle. Beyond the rim the earth flattens and slopes gradually into the Earth's interior. The true Pole in the exact center of the cone is perpendicular, for this point is at the exact center of the opening of the hollow into the Earth's interior.

What is the origin of ocean waves? This oscillation of ocean waters is basically explained as resulting from the combined action of the Earth's rotation on its axis and the circulation of ocean water through its hollow interior and back to its surface through the polar openings, rather than on the basis of lunar magnetism, since ocean waves, unlike tides, are daily occurrences.

The writer believes that the truest conception of the structure of the Earth must be based on the idea that when it was still in a liquid, or rather molten, state, centrifugal force caused the heavy substances in its interior - rocks and metals - to be thrown toward the outer periphery, forming a solid crust about 800 miles thick and leaving the interior portion hollow, with opening at the Poles, though the South Polar opening seems to be closed by the ice cap of Antarctica, which is not present at the North Pole where an opening exists through which the kight of the central sun shines through, reflecting on the night sky as the Northern Lights. There is no "Southern Lights" because the South Polar opening is closed by the continent of Antarctica. This central sun originates from the original fire, some of which remained in the Earth's center to form it, providing a source of illumination for the interior world, capable of supporting its flora and fauna as our sun does on the Earth's surface. If the Earth was originally a ball of fire, some of this original fire remained at its center, while most of its solid matter, as a result of centrifugal force, was th rown out to its periphery by its rotation, causing a solid crust some 800 miles thick, leaving the interior hollow with a fiery ball in its center, the central sun which provides illumination for the dwellers of the Subterranean World.

In 1906, Walter S. Rockey Company published a book by William Reed entitled "The Phantom of the Poles" in which he offered scientific proof in favor of such a conception of the Earth's structure. In this book he presented a picture of a "Globe Showing Section of the Earth's Interior." Contrary to the usual view of a fiery or solid core, Reed claims the earth is hollow inside its solid crust which has a thickness of 800 miles and a diameter of 6,400 miles in its hollow center. He writes:

"The earth is hollow. The Poles so long sought are but phantoms. There are openings at the northern and southern extremities. In the interior are vast continents, oceans, mountains and rivers. Vegetable and animal life are evident in this new world, and is probably peopled by races yet unknown to dwellers on the earth's surface."

Fourteen years later, in 1920, Eugene Smith Company of Aurora, Illinois, published a book by Marshall B. Gardner entitled "A Journey to the Earth's Interior - or Have the Poles Really Been Discovered?" Gardner depicts the globe as having a large circular opening at each of its poles, the ocean water adhering, by force of gravity (which resides in the center of the solid part and not in its true center), to the crust on all sides of the opening. Gardner presents a picture entitled: "The Earth as it would appear if viewed from space, showing the North Polar opening to the planet's interior, which is hollow and contains a central sun instead of an ocean of liquid lava."

The next diagram in Gardner's book shows a cross section of the Earth, with the solid crust about 800 miles thick and the hollow center 6400 miles in diameter, of which 600 miles is occupied by the central sun. The Polar openings are shown as being 1400 miles wide. Below this diagram we read:

"Diagram showing the Earth as a hollow sphere with its polar openings and central sun. The letters at the top and bottom of the diagram indicate the various steps of an imaginary journey through the planet's interior. At the point marked "D" we catch our first glimpse of the corona of the central sun; at the point marked "E" we can see the central sun in its entirety."

Why can't we fly over these huge ice barriers or make roads and travel overland over them inside the earth? Theodore Fitch, in his "Our Paradise Inside the Earth," sees no reason why this cannot be done, even though it has not been done in the past. He believes that when these facts are popularized, every large nation would try to establish a foothold in this new world, whose land area is greater than that of our present world; and they might reach it more easily than going to the moon. Both William Reed and Marshall B. Gardner say there must exist a Land of Paradise on the other side of this mammoth ice barrier, enjoying a perfect subtropical climate.

Both Reed and Gardner claim that the temperature in the inside of the earth is much more uniform than on the outside, being warmer in winter and cooler in summer. There is adequate rainfall, more than on the surface, but never cold enough to snow. It does not have the oppressive heart of the tropics, nor the cold weather of the temperate zone and may be described as subtropical. They claim that the North Polar opening is larger than at the South Pole, where it is covered by ocean water above which is the ice of the frozen continent of Antarctica.

Gravitational pull is strongest around the curve from the exterior to the interior of the Earth. A 150 pound man would probably weight 300 pounds while sailing around the curve. When he reached the inside of the Earth he would weigh only about 75 pounds. This because less force is needed to hold a body to the inside of a hollow ball in rotation than to hold it to the outside, due to centrifugal force.

William Reed says that gravitational pull is strongest about half way around the curve on the way to the interior of the earth, being so strong there that the salt water and fresh water in icebergs don't mix. The salt water remains a few feet below the fresh water. This enables one to obtain fresh drinking water from the Atlantic Ocean.

Around the curve, inside the Earth, there is another ring of ice. It is called the Great Massive Fresh Water Ice Pack, or Ice Barrier. Each winter, this ring of ice is formed from fresh water flowing from INSIDE the Earth toward the OUTSIDE. During the winter months, billions of tons of free-flowing fresh water coming from rivers inside the Earth, following toward the outside through the opening that connects it with the inside, freeze at their mouth. This causes mountains of ice. In the summer time huge icebergs, miles long, break off and float to the outside of the earth, COMPOSED OF FRESH WATER, not salt water. Where did this fresh water come from except from rivers of the inside on the Earth. All water on the outside there is salty.

In these icebergs the mammoth and other huge prehistoric tropical animals have been found. These animals were frozen so suddenly with the coming of the Ice Age that they still have green grass in their mouths and stomachs. Tropical trees loaded with fruit have been found. Siberia and islands of the north have great ivory deposits from elephants and other huge mammals that lived there when the climate was still tropical, before a shifting of the earth on its axis suddenly turned it frigid.

Here are some questions to be answered by the one who refuses to accept the idea that the earth is hollow inside:

Can you produce definite proof that any explorer ever reached the so-called North or South Pole?

If the Earth is NOT hollow, then why does the north wind in the Arctic get warmer as one sails north beyond 70 degrees latitude?

Why are there warm northly winds and an open sea for hundreds of miles north of 82 degrees latitude?

After 82 degrees of latitude is reached, why is the needle of the compass always agitated, restless and balky?

If the Earth is NOT hollow, then why do warm winds, coming from the northern Arctic, carry more dust than any wind on earth?

If no rivers are flowing from the inside to the outside, then why are all icebergs composed of fresh water?

Why does one find tropical seeds, plants and trees floating on the fresh water from these icebergs?

If all the fresh water icebergs positively do not come from any place ON earth, as would be impossible unless we assume the existence of rivers flowing from the inside to the outside, then where do they come from?

If the inside of the Earth is not warm, why do millions of tropical birds and animals go further north in the winter time?

Why does the wind from the north carry more pollen and blossoms than any wind on the exterior?

If it is not hollow and warm inside the earth, then why does colored pollen color the snow for thousands of square miles?

Could it be that pollen from millions of acres of colored flowers causes the snow to be red, pink, yellow, blue, etc?

Around the curve inside the earth, there is a ring of ice. Most explorers have sailed straight north until they went around that 800 mile curve. Not one of them show that they were on the inside of the earth. These explorers found things exactly opposite from what they expected. As they sailed north, the north winds became warmer and warmer. Except for strong dusty warm winds once in a while, the weather was mild and pleasant. Except for icebergs coming from the interior, the sea was open and the sailing good. During the last century a sea captain, who traveled due north, claims that he curved around into the inside of the Earth through the North Polar opening.

Those who entered the interior of the Earth in this way, including Admiral Byrd, claim that they saw countless square miles of land not recorded on any map. The further north (really south) they went, the more grass, flowers, bushes, trees and other green vegetation they saw. One explorer wrote that his men gathered eight different kinds of flowers. Also explorers say they saw sloping hills covered with green vegetation and more birds and animals than can be seen anywhere ON earth.

Another writer said that he saw all kinds of warm weather animals and millions of TROPICAL birds. They were so thick that a blind man could bring down one or more birds with one shot. The lovely scenery of both sky and land of this New World was more magnificent than ever seen on the exterior of the earth. Every explorer wrote about the majesty and grandeur of the aurora or Northern Lights. (As we have stated, these result from the light of the central sun passing through the North Polar opening and projected on the night Arctic sky).

All explorers mentioned above who sailed due north (but who really curved around and traveled south inside the earth), after they curved inward, finally found the sea ended and they were blocked by an ice pack, which was very high, wide and deep. They could have landed and gone on further by foot, but no one ever did.

Most writings on the subject claim that the interior of the Earth is inhabited by a race of small brown-skinned people, and that the Eskimos, whose origin cannot be traced to any other race on the Earth's surface, came from this subterranean race, which at a prehistoric period migrated from the inside to the outside of the Earth through the North Polar opening. One explorer declared that the race known as the Arctic Highlanders came from the interior of the Earth. This explains why there are no Eskimos at the South Pole, since the opening there is blocked by ice and ocean water below it. The same applies to the polar bears and other animals found at the North Pole but not at the South Pole, where we find mostly penguins.

When the Eskimos were asked where their forefathers came from, they pointed to the north. Some Eskimo legends tell of a paradisical land of great beauty to the north, a land of perpetual light where there is neither darkness at any time nor too bright a sun. This wonderful land had a mild climate, where large lakes never freeze, and where tropical animals roam in herds. Here birds of many colors cloud the sky. It is a land of perpetual youth where people live for thousands of years in peace and happiness. There is a story of a British king called Herla, whom the Skraelings (Eskimos) took to a land of paradise beneath the earth. The Irish have a legend about a lovely land beyond the north where there is continuous light and summer weather.

The ancient writings of the Chinese, Egyptians, Hindus and other races, and the legends of the Eskimos, speak of a great opening in the north and a race that lives under the earth's crust, and that their ancestors came from this paradisical land in the interior of the earth.

One of the early German settlers in Brazil learned from the Indians, who preserved legends and beliefs of the Atlanteans who once colonized this country concerning the Subterranean World in the hollow interior of the Earth, with which they seem to have had contact through certain tunnels connecting the inner and outer worlds, which have openings in various places. This German wrote a book in old German about which the Indians told him, a copy of which was seen by a German friend interested in these matters, who read it. He related to the writer that the book described the Earth as having a hollow interior and a central sun, just as Gardner described in his book, and that it is inhabited in its interior by a race shorter than us but more muscular, disease-free, long-lived people who live a paradisical life, subsisting on fruits in their orchards. These people are supposed to remain young forever, never growing old and never dying. They live in a state of perfect peace and harmony, free from want, crime and discord. The book states that of all parts of the world, there are more tunnel openings which lead to the Subterranean World in the states of Santa Catarina and Parans, Brazil.

Ray Palmer, editor of "Flying Saucers" magazine, is one of the strongest proponents of the theory that flying saucers come from the interior of the earth and not from other planets as he formerly believed. He "challenges everybody who believes that the flying saucers come from other planets. They come from this Earth! Up to now, the main objection to this theory has been lack of a PLACE on Earth where they might come from. This objection no longer exists, because there IS a place, and a mighty big one! Admiral Byrd, before he died, called it a 'fantastic land of mystery'. Admiral Dufek, in National Geographical Magazine, calls it an "awesome expanse". Both men flew over it! So they should know. This 'expense' isn't on any world map today. Yet it is BIGGER than the entire North American continent!

"Everybody knows now that the Earth isn't round. There are various 'shapes' ascribed to it. One of them is the 'pear shape' claimed by the instruments aboard the Explorer rockets. Byrd's two flights over both poles prove there is a 'strangeness' about the shape of the Earth in both polar areas."

In the December 1959 issue of "Flying Saucers", Ray Palmer defends as follows the theory that flying saucers come from the hollow interior of the Earth through the North Polar opening, as against the theory of their interplanetary origin. He says:

:How well-known is the Earth? Is there any area on Earth which can be regarded as a possible origin for the flying saucers? There are two...The two major areas, in order of importance, are Antartica and the Arctic. In February, 1947, Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the Arctic explorer, made the following statement: "I'd like to see that land beyond the Pole. That area beyond the Pole is the center of the great unknown."

Byrd then flew to the North Pole, but did not stop there and turn back, but went for 1700 miles beyond it, and then retraced his course to his Arctic base. As progress was made beyond the Pole point, iceless land and lakes, mountains covered with trees, and even a monstrous animal, resembling the mammoth of antiquity, was seen moving through the underbrush; and all this was reported via radio by the plane's occupants. For almost all of the 1700 miles the plane flew over land, mountains, trees, lakes, rivers.

What was this unknown land? Did not Byrd, in traveling due north, enter into the hollow interior of the earth through the north polar opening? Later Byrd went to the south Pole and after passing it, went 2300 miles beyond it. The entire distance was accomplished over land. Says Palmer:

"Once again we have penetrated an unknown and mysterious land which does not appear on today's maps. And once again, we find no further announcement beyond the initial announcement of the achievement. And strangest of all, we find the world's millions absorbing the announcements, and registering a complete blank in so far as curiousity is concerned.

"Here, then, are the facts. At both poles exist unknown and vast land areas, not in the least uninhabitable, extending for distances which can only be called tremendous, because they encompass an area bigger than any known continental area! The North Polar Mystery Land seen by Byrd and his crew is at least 1700 miles across its traversed direction, and cannot be conceived to be merely a narrow strip...It is a land area perhaps as large as the entire United States!"

"In the case of the South Pole, the land traversed beyond the Pole included as area as big as North America plus the South Polar Continent.

"The flying saucers could come from these two unknown lands 'beyond the Poles'. It is the opinion of the editors of FLYING SAUCERS that the existence of these lands cannot be disproved by anyone, considering the facts of the two expeditions which we have outlined."

Admiral Byrd, on his return from the South Pole, said: "The present expedition has opened up a vast new land."

Finally, in 1957, before his death, he reported this land as "That enchanted continent in the sky, land of everlasting mystery!" Palmer comments:

Considering all this, is there any wonder that all the nations of the world have suddenly found the South Polar region (particularly), because of its known land area and the North Pole region so intensely interesting and important, and have launched explorations on a scale actually tremendous in scope?

"Byrd himself flew over no known land (in the Arctic),He himself called it 'the great unknown'. And great it is, indeed! For after 1700 miles over land, he was forced by gasoline supply limit to return, but he had not yet reached the end of it! He would have been well inside one of the known areas mentioned. He should have been back to 'civilization'. But he was not. He should have seen nothing but icecovered ocean, or at the very most, partially open ocean. Instead he was over mountains covered with forests.

"Forests!

"Incredible! The northermost limit of the timber-line is located well down into Alaska, Canada and Siberia. North of that line no tree grows! All around the North Pole, the tree does not grow within 1700 miles of the Pole!

"What have we here? We have the well-authenticated flight of Admiral Richard E. Byrd to a land beyond the Pole that he so much wanted to see, because it was the center of the unknown, the center of mystery. Apparently he had his wish gratified to the fullest, yet today in 1959, nowhere is that mysterious land mentioned. Why? Was that 1947 flight fiction? Did all the newspapers lie? Did the radio from Byrd's plane lie?

"No, Admiral Byrd did fly beyond the Pole.

"Beyond?

"What did the Admiral mean when he used the word? How is it possible to go "Beyond' the Pole?

The answer is simple. He entered into the North Polar opening leading to the hollow interior of the earth. Says Palmer:

"That land, on today's maps, cannot exist. But since it does, we can only conclude that today's maps are incorrect, incomplete, and do not present a true picture of the northern hemisphere!

"Having thus located a great land mass in the North, not on any map today, a land which is the center of the great unknown, which can only be construed to imply that the 1700 mile extent traversed by Byrd is only a portion of it," Palmer's conclusion is that since this land area is not on any map, it must exist inside the North Polar opening leading to the hollow interior of the Earth.

Byrd mentions having seen an animal like the prehistoric mammoth in this mysterious land, and probably came from there. Polar explorers not only mention fauna but also flora in the extreme north. The musk-ox, contrary to expectations, migrates NORTH in the wintertime. Repeatedly, Arctic explorers have observed bear heading north into an area where there cannot be food for them. Foxes also are found north of the 80th parallel, heading north, obviously well-fed. Without exception Arctic explorers agree that, strangely, the further north one goes, the warmer it gets. Invariably, a north wind brings warmer weather. Coniferous trees were found drifted ashore, coming from the north. Butterflies and bees are found in the far north, but never hundreds of miles further south and not until Canadian and Alaskan climate areas conducive to such insect life are reached.

Unknown varieties of flowers were also found in the extreme north. Birds resembling snipe, but unlike any known species of bird, which came out of the north and returned there. Here are plentiful in an area where no vegetation grows, but where vegetation appears as drifting debris from the northern open waters.

Eskimo tribes, migrating northward, have left unmistakable traces of their migration in their temporary camps, always advancing northward. Southern Eskimos themselves speak of tribes that live in the far north. The Ross gull, common at Point Barrow, migrates in October toward the North. We can account for these strange facts only by assuming the existence of Admiral Byrd's "mystery land" inside the North Polar opening.

Scandinacian legends tell of a wonderful land far to the north called "Ultima Thule". Palmer asks: "Is Admiral Byrd's land of mystery, center of the great unknown, the same as the Ultima Thule of the Scandinavian legends?"

In reference to the Antarctic, in New Zealand and lower South America are found identical fauna and flora which could not have migrated from one to the other, but rather are believed to come from a common motherland in the Antarctic Continent.

In favor of the Earth having a hollow interior with openings at the poles, Palmer says:

"The condensation of nebula into stars and planets is accomplished by a whirling motion. The Whirling motion more often produces the 'sprinkle' shape, round at the equator and projecting at the pole; or the 'doughnut' shape, with flattened poles and holes through the middle.

"The 'spindle' shape possesses many specific arguments against it, and is the least reasonable. Astronomical bearings taken anywhere on the 'spindle' portion would begin to show evidence of the existence of the 'spindle' shape. And they would be the reverse of factual sightings and bearings taken by Polar explorers. Actually, the bearings taken point to the 'doughnut' shape.

"Rocket scientists have made much of the discovery of the Van Allen Belt, which is a belt of radiation surrounding the Earth. The reader is invited to read about it in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, and especially note the drawings of its shape, which are precisely a vast 'doughnut', with the spherical Earth pictured at its center, in the 'hole' in the doughnut. What is the Earth is not spherical, but actually doughnut-shaped, exactly as its surrounding Van Allen Belt? What ever makes the belt thusly shaped, might it not also be responsible for shaping the Earth similary?

"The evidence is extremely strong, and amazingly prolific in scope and extent, that the Earth actually is shaped in this fashion. And if it is hollow, then we no longer need look for the saucers from out space - but rather from 'inner space'! And judging from the evidences, the interior is extremely habitable! Vegetation in abundance is there; animals abound; the 'extinct' mammoth still lives! Byrd flew 1700 miles over the inner edge of the 'doughnut hole', and the Navy flew 2300 miles over the opposite inner edge. Both flights want a partial way into the inner Earth. And if this is all true, then no doubt extended flights to 10,000 miles and beyond have been made since 1957 into this hollow Earth, for we have the planes with the range to do it! If the sogvernment knew the significance of the Byrd-Navy flights, it would certainly not neglect to explore further."

Thus, Ray Palmer, basing his conclusions on Admiral Byrd's observations and that of other Arctic explorers, confirms the theory of the Earth being hollow, first proposed by Reed back in 1906 and later presented by Gardner in 1920. Palmer writes:

"On September 15, 1959, the Soviet atomic powered icebreaker was launched, and supposedly is on its way, or about to proceed, toward the North Pole with the intention of reaching it by smashing its way all the way through the ice. This would admittedly be quite an achievement, and more evidence of their amazing progress in science, but it is our opinion that the Russians do not do things merely for propaganda value. And considering the weight of evidence we have presented in this issue (which is only a fragment of what is available), there exists a much stronger reason for the Societ icebreaker to proceed Poleward. Consider: What better mode of travel to proceed into that 'unknown land' beyond the Pole, which extends uncounted thousands of miles where no thousands of miles appear to exist? Here we have a craft that has a cruising range of 40,000 miles. It can go anywhere with no danger of being stranded for lack of fuel. It is a craft exactly suited for bridging the ice barrier of a frozen ocean that has always been the 'wall' between the known world and the 'unknown' world Admiral Byrd proved beyond all doubt exists.

"Once through the ocean of ice, into a warm ocean, it is admirably suited for exploration deep into that unknown area, as far as water exists, exploring unknown coastlines. There is more reason for the Soviet icebreaker to go to the North Pole than merely to duplicate the feat of two American atomic submarines. But where the submarines are limited by size, the giant icebreaker can brave the most dangerous of unknowns. It is, in effect, also a floating battleship. Nothing can successfully attack it in a strange land, except perhaps flying saucers.

"However, it may be that the Russians are unaware of Admiral Byrd's discovery (although how this would be we cannot conceive) and the icebreaker will not go 'beyond' the Plle. It just occurs to us that the Russians have constructed an ideal craft for the work that seems to be at hand. An icebreaker could follow the shorelines of unknown continents, whereas a submarine is traveling virtually blind most of the time, and unable to travel on the surface after it has broken up through the ice, simply because that is the extent of its icebreaking capacity. An atomic submarine is not suited to exploration of the frozen unknown land, and only an icebreaker can smash its way through to the open water, and then visually skirt the shores of the unknown country."

It is strange that Reed's and Garnder's significant books which presented an epoch-making geographical theory, comparable to the belief that the Earth is round, when proposed at a time when it was believed to be flat, should have been so neglected and forgotten, that they are almost completely ignored by the scientific world. Could this be due to deliberate suppressions? Is it not possible that governments, who realize that beyond the Poles exists a land area larger than tnat on the surface, would consider this the most precious of all its secrets and would make every effort to guard it, so that other nations may not learn about it and attempt to reach this new territory first. From M's experience, described below, this seems to be so.

Dr. G. M., director of the UFO World Research, claims to have made many trips by flying saucer to the hollow interior of the Earth and sent us a map showing the route he traveled and where he landed to the right of the North Polar opening, but on the inside. There he met the inhabitants of this New World, among whom he is well known. Admiral Byrd called this region "the mysterious land beyond the Pole", which he tried to reach by airplane, covering a distance of 1700 miles beyond the Pole, the only way to go "beyond" which being to enter the opening that leads to the hollow center of the Earth, for otherwise there could be no land "beyond" the North Pole.

After a brief press announcement, this great discovery of an immense land area as large as North America, not shown on any map, was hushed up by the Government for important reasons, and no further mention of it made. The reason for this is that if other nations learned that there existed a land area inside the Earth greater in area than that on its surface, there would be danger that they would try to get there first. Dr. M. writes:

"There is really no North or South Pole. (Where the Poles are supposed to exist are really openings leading to the hollow interior of the Earth.

"Most flying saucers come from the land beyond the North Pole (that is, from the hollow interior of the Earth, reached by the North Polar opening). This region enjoys an ideal uniform temperature of 76 degrees.

"This New World inside the Earth is inhabited by a wonderful race of people who are a thousand years or more ahead of us in invention, science and mechanics. They have machines that control the weather and use flying saucers for transportation."

In the middle of January, 1960 Dr. M. was visited by two subterranean men who came on a flying sucer from the interior of the earth. One was called "Sol-Mar" and the other "Zola". They told him than on Jan. 28, 1960, they would take him on a trip to Sao Francisco Island on the coast of Santa Catarina, Brazil and then to the North Pole, where the saucer would enter the opening and proceed to the hollow interior of the Earth. The writer was supposed to be picked up by the Saucer in Santa Catarina.

The writer anxiously awaiting Dr. M's arrival and the opportunity to make the trip to the earth's interior by flying saucer, which he claims to have made so many times. Dr. M. impresses the writer with sincerity and genuineness, as strange as the things he says may seem. It is very evident that any government that saw the possibility of acquiring a land area greater than what exists now on the entire Earth's surface would take every precaution to carefully guard the secret and not permit people like Dr. M, who knew it, to talk freely about it, much less actually visit that land by the only vehicle capable of going there - a FLYING SAUCER!

Chapter Two

THE SUBTERRANEAN ORIGIN OF THE FLYING SAUCERS

The first one to suggest that flying saucers came from the Subterranean World was Professor Henrique Jose de Saouza, presidnet of the Brazilian Theosophical Society and chief exponent of the existence of a Subterranean World in Brazil, who has erected at Sao Lourenzo, in the state of Minas Gerais, Brazil, an immense temple in Greek style, dedicated to "Agarta", Oriental name of the Subterranean Empire. In this city a number of his disciples from all parts of the world and speaking all languages have gathered, all of whom believe in the existence of the Subterranean World and that flying saucers came from there.

One of those who settled in Sao Lourenzo as a disciple of the Professor was Commander J. Strauss of the Brazilian navy, who was much interested in flying saucers. Another was OlC. Huguenin, who published a book dedicated to the Professor's views on the subterranean origin of flying saucers, and dedicated to him, called "From the Subterranean World to the Sky: Flying Saucers." The writer picked up a copy of this book in a bookstore in Sao Paulo, at a time when he believed in the interplanetary th eory of th eir origin. While at first the idea seemed very strange, finally he became convinced that it was the correct explanation.

Hugeunin's book was inspired by a series of articles that appeared in Brazil's popular magazine, "O Cruziero", on Feb. 5,12 and 19, 1955, devoted to the subject matter of a series of lectures delivered in Rio de Janeiro by Commander Strauss, on the subject of the subterranean origin of the flying saucers. In his book, Huguenin presents Strauss's views in defense of the theory that flying saucers do not come from other planets, but from the Subterranean World, by the following arguments:

"The hypothesis of the extra-terrestrial origin of the flying suacers does not seem acceptable. Another possibility is that they are military aircraft belonging to some existing nation on earth. This pypothesis, however, is opposed by the following arguments:

"1. If the United States and Rûssia possessed flying saucers, they would not desist from announcing this fact because of its value as a psychological arm to secure advantages in the diplomatic field. Also they would manufacture and use these vehicles for military purposes, since they are so rapid and powerful that they would leave the enemy almost without means of defense.

"2. The United States and USSR would not continue to spend large sums of money on the manufacture of ordinary airplanes if they possessed the secret of producing flying saucers."

After presenting the argument that flying saucers do not come from any existing nation and his view that they are not of interplanetary origin, Huguenin concludes that they come from the Subterranean World. On this subject he writes:

"Finally, we must consider the most recent and interesting theory that has been offered to account for the origin of the flying saucers: the existence of a great Subterranean World with innumerable cities in which live millions of inhabitants....This other humanity must have reached a very high degree of civilization, economic organization and social, cultural and spiritual development, together with an extraordinary scientific progress, in comparison with whom the humanity that lives on the earth's surface may be considered as a race of barbarians.

"The idea of the existence of a Subterranean World will shock many people. To others it will sound absurd and impossible, for 'certainly,' they would say, 'if it existed, it would have been discovered long ago.' And there are plenty of other critics who would point out that it would be impossible for such an inhabited world to exist inside the earth because of the belief that as one descends temperature increases, on the basis of which theory it is supposed that, since temperature increases the further down one goes, the center of the earth is a fiery mass. However, this increase in temperature does not mean that the center of the earth is a fiery mass, since it might extend only for a limited distance and, as in the case of volcanos and hot springs, arise from subterranean cavities located at certain levels (below which the temperature again drops as one goes downward)..... In accordance with the hypothesis that heat increases as one descends through the earth's crust, this takes place only during a distance of eighty kilometers (in the superficial layer of the earth).

"According to the information supplied by Commander Paulo Justin Strauss, the Subterranean World is not restricted to caverns, but is more or less extensive and is located in a hollow inside the Earth large enough to contain cities and fields, where live human beings and animals, whose physical structure resemble those on the surface. Among its inhabitants are certain persons who came from the surface, who, like Colonel Fawcett and his son Jack, descended, never to return. (Huguenin here refers to the views of Commander Strauss and Professor de Souza on the controversial subject of Colonel Fawcett's mysterious disappearance, claiming that he and his son are still alive in the Subterranean World to which they gaines access and were not killed by Indians in Matto Grosso as commonly supposed. Fawcett's wife, who claims to be in telepathic touch with him and who believes that he is still living, sent an expedition to Matto Grosso to find him, in charge of her other son, but in vain.)"

Huguenin then asks how these marvelous subterranean cities and this advanced civilization under the earth arose. His answer is that the builders and most of the inhabitants of this Subterranean World are members of an antediluvian race which came from the prehistoric submerged continents of Lemuria and Atlantis, who came there to escape the catastrophe that destroyed their motherland, He claims that the Atlanteans brought with them their aircrafts, on which they continued to fly in the interior atmosphere in the hollow center of the earth, a concave world in which a direct airline is the shortest distance between two points. These were called "vimanas"; but when they rose to the surface for the first time in such large amounts, as they did following the Hiroshima atomic explosion of 1945, they were known as "flying saucers."

The reason for this mass visitation of flying saucers after the Hiroshima nuclear explosion was the apprehension of subterranean scientists that the continuance of nuclear explosions might lead to a radioactive poisoning of the atmosphere, which would vitiate the air that entered the subterranean atmosphere in the hollow center of the earth, coming in from the outside; so that it was not a matter of pure altruism, but also one of self-defense and self-protection that made the subterranean people send their flying saucers up in order to establish friendship with the inhabitants of the earth's surface at this time, with the goal of convincing government and military leaders of the extreme importance and necessity, if the human race is to survive and not destroy itself through nuclear suicide, to discontinue nuclear tests.

It was for this reason that flying suacers were first sent up in such great numbers in fleet formation and why they appeared so often near military airports or accompanied passenger planes in flight, so as to be seen by members of the Air Force and by commercial pilots, since those who sent them felt that reports coming from airmen concerning flying sauceer sightings would be considered with more seriousness by government leaders than those, coming from laymen, which would be put aside as products of optical illusion or imagination. After convincing chiefs of the Air Force that they exist, their next plan was, through these Air Force leaders, to convince the heads of the Government of their existence. After the fact was accepted that members of a superior, more highly civilized race had come to earth, they hoped that Government leaders would perhaps receive some of their scientists who would be sent up specially for this purpose, to convince them of the supreme importance of halting further nuclear tests and abolishing all nuclear weapons as a menace to the survival of the human race on earth, including their own people.

Huguenin believes that flying saucers are really Atlantean aircraft intended for serial navigation and not space ships as commonly supposed. He claims that they came up from the interior atmosphere of the Earth where they existed since the days of Atlantis, and to where they were transferred before Atlantis sank, when a group of Atlanteans established residence in the Subterranean World and they carried their aircraft, known as "vimanas" and later as "flying suacers" with them. These reappeared in the upper atmosphere in numbers only after the Hiroshima atomic explosion in 1945, which caused much apprehension to the subterranean people whose atmosphere is derived from our own. This was the first time in history when surface inhabitants committed an act which directly affected the welfare of the subterranean people; and it was for this reason that it was the first time they sent their aircraft up into our atmosphere as an act of self-protection.

In evidence of the fact that aerial navigation existed long before the making of the first airplane by the Wright brothers, the director of the International Academy of Sanskrit Investigation at Mysan, Indian discovered an ancient ttreatise on aeronautics, which was written three thousand years ago. It was attributed to the Hindu sage Bharadway, who wrote a manuscript called "Vymacrika Shostra," meaning "the science of aeronautics," in eight chapters, with diagrams, describing three types of aircraft, including apparatuses that could neither catch on fire nor break, and mentions thirty-one essential parts of these vehicles and sixteen materials from which they are constructed, which absorb light and heat, and for this reason are considered appropriate for the construction of airplanes. It is interesting to note the similarity of the word "vymacrika" and "vimanas," name of Atlantean aircraft, which are, in the writer's opinion, identical with flying saucers.

Another argument in support of the subterranean origin of flying saucers, as against the interplanetary theory, is that it seems much more probable that flying saucers could come from inside the earth's hollow center through the North Polar opening, a journey of a few thousand miles, than travel here from planets or stars many millions of miles or light years away. Space travel has as yet not been proven to be safe or possible for humans, even if it can be accomplished with rockets, whereas aerial navigation is an accomplished fact. Therefore it is more reasonable to suppose that flying saucers came from inside the earth than from outer space.

In the December 1959 issue of his magazine, "Flying Saucers," Ray Palmer presents his conviction that suacers come from the interior of the earth and not from outer space. He says:

"In this issue we have presented the results of years of research, in which we advance the possibility that the saucers not only are from our own planet, and NOT from space, inner or outer, but that there is a tremendous mass of evidence to show that there is an UNKNOWN location of vast dimensions which is, insofar as we can safely state at this writing, also unexplored, where the saucers can, and most probably do originate. Even before the issue is off the press, one enterprising reader shoots the question at us: 'All right, if the saucers aren't from outer space, then how come Buck Nelson and few dozen more claim to have ridden to Mars, Venus, the moon, etc. Are you kidding us?'

"We've read all the accounts of such voyages and nowhere, in any of them, can we find positive evidence that space was traversed! In all of the accounts, we can see where the passengers could have been taken to this 'unknown land' discovered by Admiral Byrd, and if told they were on Mars, would not know the difference!

"Provided an actual trip in a saucer was made, the pilots of the saucers could have simulated a space trip (how high would it be necessary to go?) and instead taken their passengers to 'that mysterious land beyond the Pole,' as Admiral Byrd called it."

In an article, "Saucers from Earth!: A Challenge to Secrecy!" in the December 1959 issue of "Flying Saucers," Palmer writes:

"'FLYING SAUCERS' has amassed a large file of evidence which its editors consider unassailable, to prove that the flying saucers are native to the planet Earth: that the governments of more than one nation (if not all of them) know this to be a fact; that a concerted effort is being made to learn all about them, and to explore their native land; that the facts already known are considered so important that they are the world's top secret; that the danger is so great that to offer public proof is to risk widespread panic; that public knowledge would bring public demand for action which would topple governments both helpless and unwilling to comply; that the inherent nature of the flying saucers and their origination area is completely disruptive to political and economic status-quo."

"Flying saucers," says the editor, Ray Palmer, "have been with humanity for centuries, if not thousands of years." This factor of antiquity, he says, "eliminates contemporary earth governments as the originators of the mysterious phenomena."

After disproving that flying saucers come from any existing nation, Palmer then attacks the theory of their interplanetary origin, whose chief proponent is Keyhoe, some "contactees" claiming that saucers come from Mars, others from Venus and others from other places.

Palmer opposes both the theory of saucers coming from any nation on the earth's surface and from other planets, in favor of their subterranean origin.

He says: "Because our planet is quite well (but not completely) known, it has been easy for interplanetary theorists to prove that the strange objects are not made by any single government or group of governments on Earth. Such a vast project could not remain secret over so long a period, and also, the matter of antiquity does not allow the phenomena to be fitted into the history of any existing governments."

"Aime Michel, in his 'straight line' theory, proved that most of the 'flight patterns' of the flying saucers are on a north-south course, which is exactly what would be true if the origin of the saucers is Polar.

"Now that we have tracked the saucers to the most logical origin (the one we have consistently insisted must exist because of the insurmountable obstacle of interstellar origin which demands factors beyond imagination), that the saucers come from our own Earth, it must be proved or disproved, one way or the other.

"Why? Because if the interior of the Earth is populated by a highly scientific and advanced race, we must make profitable contact with them; and if they are mighty in their science, which includes the science of war, we must not make enemies of them; and if it is the intent of our governments to regard the interior of the Earth as 'virgin territory,' and comparable to the 'Indian Territory' of the North America when the settlers came over to take it away from its rightful owners, it is the right of the people to know that intent, and to express their desire in the matter.

"The flying saucer has become the most important single factor in history. The answer to the questions raised in this article must be answered. Admiral Byrd has discovered a new and mysterious land, in the center of the great unknown, and the most important discovery of all time. We have it from his own lips, from a man whose integrity has always been unimpeachable, and whose mind was one of the most brilliant of modern times.

"Let those who wish to call him a liar step forward and prove their claim. Flying Saucers come from this Earth!"

Could the 'little brown men,' ancestors of the Eskimos, who William Reed and Marshall B. Gardner claimed were dwellers of the hollow interior of the Earth and the small men who were observed to be the pilots of the flying saucers be an identical race? Theodore Fitch, proponent of the theory that the Earth has an inhabited hollow interior, claims that this is the case and that the flying saucers, which come from the Earth's interior atmosphere, are driven by these small men. In his "Our Paradise Inside the Earth," he writes about them as follows:

"Though small than we are, they are much stronger. Their grip is like a vise. One of them could quickly overpower a strong man. Their bodies are perfect in build. Both men and women dress very neatly. Though not beautiful, they are nice looking. Not one of them looks to be over 30 years old. They say that they do not expect to die, but that some do die.

"It would take a book to record the conversations that have taken place with the saucermen and women. Their speech is quick, sharp and right to the point. They seem to be very, very intelligent. They talk freely and answer all questions but they lie about things they do not want us to know (refusing to reveal their true subterranean origin and pretending to come from other planets, as Mars and Venus).

"Here are a few brief statements or claims made by the little men and women who live inside this earth. Some of them are not true, but you be the judge.

"They boast about their superior mentality and knowledge, and that they excell us in creative ability. They say they are far ahead of us from the standpoint of new inventions. For instance, they claim that their flying saucers are powered with 'free energy' (meaning the electromagnetic evergy of space, which is free and not like fuel used to supply our aircraft). They claim that they obtain this 'free energy' by exploding certain atoms by action of the electromagnetic evergy os space while in flight.

"They say that they are thousands of years ahead of us in all of the arts, such as painting, sculpture and architectural design. Also that they are ahead of us in their domestic and business management, in their agricultural techniques, and that their beautiful landscapes, parks, flower gardens, orchards and farms vastly surpass our own.

"They claim that they are far ahead of us in their knowledge of nutrition and in their diet.

"They claim to live in luxury, yet have no class distinction and no poverty nor crime among them, nor need of police. (In this and all other respects they resemble remarkably the subterranean race of vegetarian supermen and superwomen described by Bulwer Lytton in his book 'The Coming Race').

"They say that their saucermen know every language on earth."

Fitch's description of the Utopian super civilization of the subterranean people is almost identical with that of Bulwer Lytton in his "The Coming Race" both claiming that they lived in a state of universal abundance and contentment, free from poverty, greed, selfishness and war. Fitch remarks: "They teach the same wicked doctrines taught by communism," for they advocate an economic system in which all own everything in common, without private aggrandisement and hoarding, and without economic competition, practicing cooperation instead. Among them there is no class distinctions of rich and poor, capitalist and worker. They have an equitable system of distribution free from exploitation and usary; and there is no poverty among them, for all are on a basis of perfect equality through a system of common ownership. Private property is abolished among them, and they all work together for their common welfare, Fitch adds:

"They say they know all the secrets of every government.
"They say that they are of a higher intelligence and authority.
"In other words, they boast that they have authority over us (since they are our superiors).
"They claim to be experts in mental telepathy.
"They claim that they came from an antediluvian race (Lemurian and Atlanteas).
"They say that they can become invisible and pass through walls and doors.
"They claim to worship a Supreme Being who sees all and knows all.
"They say that they know nothing at all about Jesus, and say our Bible is mistranslated and mininterpreted and misconstrued.

"They say they can save man, not from sin but from himself.

"They claim they are a race which has not fallen as we have.

"They say we should and will have one world government.

"They say we should get rid of nuclear bombs and armaments (by destroying all atomic stockpiles and prohibiting their further manufacture, as well as by declaring and enforcing total world peace by international agreement and through a World Court).

"They say that all their efforts are for peace. They say that our peace is due to their efforts in our behalf, and that they saved us from being plunged into a suicidal nuclear world war, and that we should look to them for guidance." (This would make them our NUCLEAR AGE SAVIORS).

"Many photographs have been taken of saucers in action, also standing still. These pictures show that they are about 100 feet to 400 feet long or high. Pictures have been taken of the little brown saucermen and their words are recorded on tape. Certain Americans have taken both short and long rides in both small and large ships. And they have proof of what they saw and heard.

"Writers of the books on flying suacers believe that they come from other planets. But how can that be? They are too far away. Traveling at terrific speeds it would take a lifetime to make the trip (to planets of other solar systems)."

In other words, it is Fitch's belief, as it is the writer's, that the so-called "spacemen" and "saucermen" who pose as visitors from other planets, are really members of an advanced civilization in the hollow interior of our own earth, who have important reasons for keeping their true place of origin a secret and to purposely foster the false belief that they come from other planets. On this subject, Fitch says:

"They say that they come from other planets, but we doubt it." He considers this a white lie in order to prevent surface militarists and militaristic governments from learning that on the opposite side of the Earth's crust there exists an advanced civilization whose scientific attainments surpass our own, which is reached by the North Polar opening. Fortunately, it is not easy for any nation on the surface to pass through this opening to the hollow interior of the Earth, though the scientific achievements of the subterranean people are so far in advance of our own that in event of a war it would not be difficult for them to cause their attackers to become disintegrated into their consistuent atoms as a result of radiations at their command, constituting a source of energy beyond atomic energy, which is more destructive than our hydrogen bombs and which produces no fallout.

The reason why the hollow interior of the Earth has a larger land area than the outer surface is because while 75 per cent of the earth's surface is covered with water, leaving only 55 million square miles of land surface, the total surface of the earth is 197 million square miles. Fitch claims that there are no oceans in the interior comparable in size with those on the surface, and that there is three times as much land inside the earth than outside, so that in spite of the fact that its circumference and total area is less, its land area is larger. Fitch says that it is not only larger but better in all ways, having a better and healthier climate, being tropical and without cold winters, hurricanes, earthquakes, electric storms, cyclones, floods, radioactive fallout, nefarious cosmic rays, harmful, radioactive solar rays, soil erosion from excessive rainfall leadint to vitamin and mineral deficiencies, etc.

Rather than seek to colonize the dead surface of the moon or to reach Mars, this New World is nearer and offers more opportunities for colonization. Humanity as at present constituted, however, is unfit to enjoy this privilege; and, rather than being a benefit, selfishness and greed would cause no end of wars in an effort by world powers to gain control over this new territory. For that reason knowledge of this Subterranean World has until now been a closely guarded secret.

Fitch agrees with Palmer that flying saucers are not "space ships," as Adamski claimed, nor are their pilots "spacemen." Rather they are vehicles intended for atmospheric travel either in the interior or exterior atmosphere of the earth, while the "little brown men in the flying saucers," according to Fitch, belong to the same race as the subterranean one from which the Eskimos descended.

In one letter to the writer, D. G. M., director of UFO World Research, claimed he visited the interior of the earth by flying saucer, which entered through the North Polar opening, forty times. The following letter was received from his secretary.

"This letter may be of vital importance to all of us, so I trust you will give it your immediate attention. Your writer is a member of the UFO World Research. Dr. G. M. is world director, and has been in the work 14 years. His uncle in England, a multi-millionaire, began the organization 16 years ago.

"You have very kindly kept me on your mailing list for the past several years. I have been a vegetarian for twenty years and have desired to have a place to live in your community on the island of Sao Francisco.

"Dr/ G. M. and I worked together very closely and I have been wanting to write to you for some time, but was not sure that you had an understanding of the flying saucers and the people living under the earth and various so-called mysteries that this organization is investigating.

"Our director has been taken inside the earth via the North Pole opening on many different trips on a flying saucer. He is in constant touch with the saucer people and in conference with them.

"Because of his position and the orders he is under, he does not seek or desire any publicity whatever, and this letter is not for publication or for showing to anyone outside of our group, because various governments and air forces do not want certain information given publicity. This group gathers information for its members only, which they can best receive by writing in for answers to specific questions. This group cooperates with all law-enforcement agencies and if any of its members gets into trouble by reason of becoming contactees or inadvisably disclosing information, the organization will use its influence in such manner that said member will have the least amount of difficulty from then on.

"The various governments have all of the information that we have, but in order to avoid panic by the lunatic frings and perhaps from many other vital reasons of security, they wish this information to be kept among those who are not mentally affected by it.

"Saucers are not necessarily from other planets. They may be earth-made, coming from the center of the earth."

Chapter Three

SIFNIFICANCE OF THE MASS VISITATION OF FLYING SAUCERS FOLLOWING THE HIROSHIMA ATOMIC EXPLOSION IN 1946

While isolated flying saucers were seen on and off down through history, it was only after the occurence of the Hiroshima atomic explosion that they came in numbers and in mass formation. Some flying saucer writers took this to mean that the flash of this atomic explosion caused inhabitants of other planets and solar systems to be worried and to send their space ships to earth to either observe the situation here, stop further atomic explosions or both. This conclusion, however, seems to be unwarranted, because of the following facts:

1. The explosion of a small atomic bomb could never constitute such a grave danger to the inhabitants of distant stars many light years away to warrant them to come on flying saucers; and, moreover, they could not have arrived here as soon after the explosion as they did even if they traveled at the speed of light.

2. In view of the great number of flying saucers that appeared in the earth's atmosphere after the Hiroshima atomic explosion, it would be impossible to explain how, if they came from different planets of different solar systems, many light years away, they could all arrive at exactly the same time and as quickly as they did.

On the other hand, if they came from the same source, why should so many space ships be sent here when a single one could conduct what observations were necessary?

3. The fact that flying saucers came in such great number and in fleet formation would indicate that, rather than coming from other planets and solar systems, where the flash of the Hiroshima atomic explosion could not create sufficient damage to warrant their preoccupation, they came from the earth's interior atmosphere through the North Polar opening because of the danger of contamination of the Earth's interior atmosphere by radioactive poisoning of the outer atmosphere from which it is derived. This would be a sufficient reason for inhabitants inside the earth to send their aircraft to the surface in an effort to study the situation and to befriend and contact military and government leaders, in an effort to bring a halt to further nuclear explosions.

Since all efforts by those who sent their flying saucers into our atmosphere to induce the government of the United States to recognize their existence failed, and since the Russians were more open-minded and cooperative, they decided to use the Russians to carry on their campaign to end nuclear tests and establish world disarmament, and through them to convince the other governments of the world of the extreme peril of a nuclear war to the survival of the human race, and the urgent necessity to establish and enforce permanent world peace if the human race is to continue. Unlike Americans, Soviet scientists freely admitted the existence of flying saucers as coming from a more advanced civilization they are anxious to contact; and the USSR Academy of Science and Space Research has admitted that such craft really exist, believing they come from the planet Venus, also stating that some saucers have crashed to earth and their pilots were killed. This is in sharp contrast to the attitude of American scientists and of the U.S. Air Force chiefs in refusing to admit the existence of flying saucers and in suppressing any public information about them.

While flying saucers previously rose to the surface only occasionally and individually before the Hiroshima explosion, this caused them to come up from the Subterranean World in large numbers and in mass formation. As explained before, the atmosphere receives air from the outer atmosphere through certain openings through the earth's crust that connect both. For this reason radioactive poisoning of the outer atmosphere would endanger the inhabitants of the inner atmosphere, who, accordingly, sent up their flying saucers in mass formation for purposes of self-protection. This seems to be a more reasonable explanation than that the flash of the Hiroshima explosion, when it reached the inhabitants of distant planets, caused them to immediately send their flying saucers here for self-protection.

While it is true that radioactive poisoning of our atmosphere would constitute a source of danger to inhabitants of the earth's interior atmosphere, which would eventually be poisoned too, since it receives its air from the outside through the North Polar opening that connects both atmospheres, so that they would have reason send up their flying saucers to protect themselves against the danger of atmospheric poisoning, in the case of inhabitants of other planets, there seems no reason for them to be worried about the flash of a small atomic bomb on earth, when much worse radioactive explosions and sources of radiation occur in various parts of the universe. Do not cosmic rays come from radioactive processes in stars? Is not the sun a blazing mass of radioactivity sending out radioactive radiations, which, in the case of sunspots, might be more dangerous than the radiations of the Hiroshima explosion? May not the explosion of certain stars and their disappearance constitute a terrific nuclear blast in space far more powerful than the atomic explosion in Hiroshima? Might not the onslaught of cosmic rays, including those from our sun, constitute a graver peril to space travelers coming to Earth from other planets on account of the Hiroshima explosion than this explosion itself? Also, it is impossible to explain how, if they come from other solar systems many light years away, they could arrive here so soon after the Hiroshima blast, granted that they started on their journey when its flash first reached them after traveling for some light years and all at the same time?

Certainly inhabitants of the earth's hollow center, living in a closed atmosphere which ultimately derives its ventilation from the outer atmosphere, through the opening at the North Pole, would have more reason to worry about the atomic explosion in Hirishima and its future consequences than inhabitants of other planets. Moreover, it is presumptuous to believe that this tiny earth could be of such importance to attract people from various parts of the universe simply because a small atomic bomb was exploded on it, and it would be still less likely that their space craft would all arrive here at exactly the same time, regardless of their distance from us - for if they started on their journey when the flash of the Hiroshima explosion reached them, they would arrive here at different times, and not all at the same time, as occurred during the mass visitation of flying saucers that took place after the Hiroshima explosion. On the other hand, if they came from the Subterranean Worldthere would be much more probability of their coming up all at the same time.

Also, if flying saucers came from different planets, why are they so much alike? It is very unlikely that different forms of life inhabiting different planets, each with its own chemistry and type of atmosphere, would all produce exactly the same type of space craft according to an identical model. On the other hand, if flying saucers came from the Subterranean World, then we can understand why they are so much alike, since they were made by the same subterranean race and are really atlantean aircraft, or "vimanas," which have been visiting us since time immortal, but were never studied nor reports about them credoted ½ropr tp tjeor ,ass vosotatopm fp;;pwomg tje Jorpsjo,a arp,oc ex½;psion of 1945, when they first came to the world's attention.

The reason why flying saucers came in such great number and in fleet formation was evidently because of a massive publicity effort on the part of the subterranean people who wished to make their existence known to all governments capable of exploding nuclear bomvs, with the object of later convincing them to desist from such a suicidal policy, dangerous to themselves as well as to the subterranean people. But when they saw that their efforts to establish friendly contact with surface races and their governments failed, they recalled their fleets of fly ing saucers, retaining only a few in our atmosphere in order to conduct fallout measurements.

Further arguments against the possibility that the mass visitation of flying saucers following the Hiroshima explosion originated in other planets are the following. If the flash of the Hiroshima explosion, reaching people of distant planets, was sufficient cause for a mass migration of space ships from various parts of the universe toward our insignificant planet, each traveling for millions of miles to reach us and all landing at about the same time, regardless of the number of light years that they must travel, why did they come and travel so far and why did each planet send such a large delegation, since a single space ship would be sufficient to appraise the situation and report to headquarters what had taken place here?

If the explosion of a single small atomic bomb was such a peril to the equilibrium of the solar system as some writers claim, then surely the explosion of so many much more powerful hydrogen bombs since should have utterly destroyed it by now. Or did these planetary visitors miscalculate and make a mistake by coming here, being frightened by the flash of the Hiroshima explosion into thinking that it would produce a greater catastrophe than it actually did? All these considerations weaken the hypothesis that the Hiroshima blast occasioned a mass visitation from other planets and would make it more probable than a race living inside our own, whose existence was endangered by the poisoning of the air they breathed that the Hiroshima blast and the nuclear explosions to occur would cause, and so sent their flying saucers in large number for purpose of display and publicity and not because so many were really necessary.

As against the interplanetary theory of the origin of the saucers that composed the fleets that visited us after the Hiroshima explosion, on grounds that planetary visitors would not come in fleets but in isolated craft for purposes of study, is the additional fact that if they did come, they would stay a while and return home to give their report to headquarters. Certainly they would not linger on fifteen long years as the saucers have done between 1945 and 1959. If they come from other planets they would long since have run out of food, water and possibly artificial air they brought with them, and certainly would not have remained so long. And why should they if their purpose was observation and study?

The subterranean theory explains the reason for the persistence of flying saucers in our atmosphere for the past fifteen years better than the theory of their being interplanetary visitors, who would be unlikely to remain so long and who would have run out of supplies during this period of time. If they came to stop atomic tests they certainly did not succeed until fifteen years later; and if the flash of the Hiroshima atomic explosion had such a detrimental effect on their planet, apparently they failed to prevent the many much more powerful hydrogen bomb explosions that occurred during their stay here. Also they had no reason to come in such great numbers when a few visitors could tell the same story back home as a needlessly large number could do.

All these considerations support the subterranean hypothesis, namely that flying saucers first came in fleet formation for purposes of display and to attract our attention to the fact of their existence; and secondly, they remained for such a long period of time in our atmosphere in order to conduct fallout measurements so as to keep tab on the degree of radioactive contamination of our atmosphere which is the source of their own air supply, so that they could adjust their air purifiers accordingly to keep up with the increasing concentration of radioactive dust that may enter their world through the north polar opening. (Regarding "air purifiers" used by subterranean people to radioactively decontaminate their atmosphere and free it from radioactive particles that may have carried into it from the outer atmosphere through the North Polar opening, see below).

Yet it was not merely the explosion of an atomic bomb in Hiroshima that worried the scientists of the Subterranean World, which caused them to send such large numbers of fly ing saucers into our atmosphere. What concerned them more were the future consequences of this explosion, namely the continued contamination of the outside air with radioactive fallout dropping down from the stratosphere, which in time would contaminate the earth's interior atmosphere as well, and that, in event of a nuclear war, after the inhabitants of the earth's surface were first killed off as a result, eventually they would be killed too. It was in order to avoid these future possibilities that they sent up their fleets of flying saucers in a desperate effort to prevent such a catastrophe, that would destroy both us and themselves.

To accomplish this, their first effort was to make their existence known to us, after this had been kept a secret for so many centuries. They hoped that we, a younger and less advanced race, would be humble enough to accept and follow the guidance of a wiser, older, more scientifically developed race, And knowing that reports about flying saucers by lay observers would be considered as mere imagination, a special effort was made to convince members of the Air Force that flying saucers exist, and for this reason they appeared so often near military airfields, as the one where Captain Mandell met his death by chasing one of them. They hoped that by convincing leaders of the Air Force of their existence, the heads of the Government would then be convinced, and after they did this, they would send up some of their scientists to confer then with these leaders and convince them of the extreme danger of continuing nuclear tests and of the importance to immediately discontinue them.

But instead of receiving these visitors who came on a mission of benevolence in a friendly way, when they appeared near airports, planes were sent after them, apparently with intent to attack them, and make necessary to ultimately defend themselves by causing their pursuers to explode and disappear, as happened with the ill-fated, persistent Captain Mandell. This they did not like to do, as they were pacifists who came on a mission of peace and good-will and not to engage in a fight with us or to have us in any way.

The tragic death and disappearance of Captain Mandell, who pursued a fleeing flying saucer until the latter lost patience and caused him to vanish by being disintegrated into atoms, would indicate that the race that sent their flying saucers to earth have at their command a superior form of energy referred to by Bulwer Lytton by the name of "vril," which is the power that opertes their craft and which they only use for destructive purposes when driven to do so in self-defense.

The Captain Mandell incident was typical of the kind of treatment the flying saucers received when they sought to befriend the U.S. Air Force leaders and, through them, the Government, with the ultimate aim of convincing the latter to stop further nuclear tests. But when they saw that instead of being received with reverence and humility, as a superior race coming to visit and jelp a less advanced one, Air Force chiefs consistently denied their existence and suppressed all evidence that might lead the public to think otherwise; and why flying saucers were persistently chased and threatened with attack by military planes, the subterranean people decided to withdraw the large fleets of flying saucers they sent up between 1945 and 1950, and left only a few hovering in our atmosphere as scouts to keep check on radioactive fallout and send reports to headquarters based on data they collected concerning atmospheric radioactive contamination.

Evidently the plan of the subterranean people, for whose fulfillment they sent their fleets of flyi ng saucers up into our atmosphere in 1945 and thereqfter, to halt further nuclear explosions by making their existence known to surface humanity, befriending them and convincing government leaders of the danger of radioactive contamination of the stmosphere if such explosions were continued, failed; and in disappointment most of the flying saucers were recalled to subterranean headquarters. Since Russian scientists were the only ones who recognized their existence and were willing to learn from them and cooperate with them, they used the Russians to convince the other nations of the world to stop further nuclear tests and to come together in conference for the purpose of preventing a future nuclear catastrophe that would exterminate humanity.

It is therefore apparent that the theory of the subterranean origin of the flying saucers is much more reasonable than the interplanetary theory; and that rather than traveling to our speck in the universe from other stars because of the flash of the Hiroshima atomic explosion constituting a danger to them, it is much more reasonable to suppose that the flying saucers were sent by a race inhabiting the hollow interior of the earth whose derives its atmosphere from our own and who were worried that the air they breathe may become poisoned by radioactivity if atomic explosions are permitted to continue.

It is for that reason that they sought to befriend us by making their existence known to us through vain display and appearing in fleet formation, which inhabitants of other planets and wolar systems would have no reason to do, nor would they come so often near military airports or accompany airliners in flight in order to attract attention and demonstrate to us their greater scientific attainments and knowledge, the purpose of which was to eventually send here their scientists who would convince our scientists and government leaders of the world menace of nuclear tests and the urgent necessity to bring them to an immediate halt.

This theory also explains why, after flying saucers were given such an unwelcome reception by U.S. Air Force chiefs and government leaders and when, instead of being received with humility and revernce as emisseries of a superior race coming to teach and help us, they were pursued in a hostile manner by military planes, they lost most of their original enthusiasm and the large fleets that appeared in the sky after 1945 and during the following five years returned to their place of origin, leaving only a few scouts in our atmosphere to conduct fallout measurements in order to inform schientists at their headquarters of the degree of concentration of radioactive poisons in the air.

The great fear of subterranean scientists was that continuation of nuclear tests might so saturate the stratosphere, troposphere and atmosphere with radioactivity that all living being on the earth's surface would be exterminated, which catastrophe they wished to prevent, for our own sake as wellas there's, for which reason they sent their flying saucers into our atmosphere immediately after the Hiroshima atomic explosion. They wished to protect their own interior atmosphere from being poisoned and also to prevent a general radioactive catastrophe, which they did,

The subterranean theory of the origin of the flying saucers, therefore, explains the observed facts much better than the interplanatary theory, at least in regards to the mass visitation that occurred following the Hiroshima explosion. It explains why large fleets appeared soon after and it also explains why these fleets were later withdrawn and why after that, only isolated craft remained our atmosphere conduct tests of atmospheric radioactive contamination. If they came from other planets to visit us, that is exactly what they would do, but the fact that they do not, but instead hovered so long in our atmosphere for no known reason is best explained on the basis of their subterranean origin and the fact that they did not come to visit us at all but to conduct fallout measurements, which only a race endangered by radioactive contamination of the atmosphere would do. On this point, Huguenin, in his book on the subterranean origin of flying saucers previously referred to, comments:

"If the flying saucers come from Mars - in spite of all the arguments we enumerated which disproved this to be possible - why don't their pilots enter into direct and frequent contact witn humanity and why didn't they do it before, since they had thousands of years in which to do so?" And why did saucers from Mars and other planets all decide to visit us at the same time and arrive at the same time, though they had to travel over different distances to reach us, which would obviously be impossible if they all commenced their journey following the flash of the Hiroshima explosion in 1945? Certainly this explosion, in the light of what was said above, could not be considered serious enough to endanger the existence of inhabitants of other planets thousands of miles away, and it is strange that the greatest number of such craft followed the milder and less frequent atomic explosions that occurred between 1945 and 1954, and not the more dangerous hydrogen bomb blasts that occurred since, which would constitute a much greater danger.

Our theory that the mass visitation of flying saucers after the Hiroshima explosion of 1945 came from the Subterranean World whose welfare would certainly be endangered by radioactive poisoning of the atmosphere through continuation of nuclear explosions is certainly more reasonable than the interplanetary hypothesis, since subterranean dwellers whose health and survival would be thus endangered would have much more reason to send up flying saucers as an act to self-protection than inhabitants of other planets so much further away.

Also, as Huguenin points out, the behavior of flying saucers does not fit into the theory that they are planetary visitors, rather than scouts sent up from the Subterranean World to conduct fallout measurements and not to visit us at all. If they were planetary visitors, Huguenin says that "it is strange and incomprehensible conduct, when we conside how a terrestrial expedition traveling to Mars and any other planet would act. Certainly on reaching its destination it would endeavor to establish cordial relations with its inhabitants. If so, why don't the pilots of flying saucers sent by Martians do the same, if they possess a grade of civilization much more elevated than our own? In other words, if they are our superiors, as they obviously are if th eir capacity for space travel is evidence of such superiority, why don't they descend, meet us, help us and teach us rather than remain aloof? And certainly, if they were supermen and came here to stop nuclear tests, they made a miserable failure of the job, at least until a recent date.

In conclusion, the Hiroshima atomic explosion did not cause inhabitants of other planets to send their flying saucers here, coming from various distances and all apparently arriving at the same time, but rather than they were sent by inhabitants of the hollow interior of the earth in order to prevent their atmosphere from being poisoned by ingress of radioactive substances coming from the outer atmosphere.

To accomplish their object, which was the halting of further nuclear tests and the prevention of a future nuclear was, they strove to make their existence known to surface inhabitants as a super race possessed of greater scientific knowledge than we do, with the object of convincing our scientists, military leaders and governments of the extreme danger of further nuclear explosions and the urgent necessity to call a halt to them.

In order to accomplish this, they decided it is best to convince chiefs of the Air Force, who would be in a position to best convince the leaders of the Government of their existence and for that reason they appeared so often hear military airports.

After convincing Air Force chiefs and the Government of their existence, their aim was to arrange secret meetings between their scientists and our's for the purpose of bringing a halt to the further manufacture and explosion of nuclear weapons.

Since Air Force chiefs refused to cooperate and deliberatley suppressed information that might lead the public and the Government to admit their existence, while Russian scientists and their Government were more open-minded, they decided to use the Russians as a means of convincing the other governments of the world to call a halt to nuclear tests and to enforce world disarmament, with the object of preventing any future nuclear war.

Are our Elder Brothers of the Subterranean World, who sent their flying saucers into our atmosphere to prevent a radioactive catastrophe interested to save a remnant of the human race from the harmful effects of radioactive fallout by bringing them to the Subterranean World where exist conditions more favorable to human well-being? We believe they are.

The first step in this direction should consist in a migration from the Northern Hemisphere, which is more heavily contaminated by radioactive fallout, to the Southern Hemisphere, where scientists admit that there is only one-fifth as much fallout than in the Northern. This is especially true south of the Tropic of Capricorn, as in Santa Catarina in South Brazil at 26 degrees south latitude, where, according to a late report by the Joint Commission on Atomic Energy, Washington, D.C., fallout is less than anywhere else on earth. Here is where a number of Americans, seeking to protect their health against fallout, are colonizing and which is the destined home of a New Age which can arise only under non-radioactive or low-radioactive conditions and certainly not in the United States which has heavier fallout than any other place on earth, according to the Atomic Energy Commission. (All readers interested in a settlement being established in beautiful subtropical Santa Catarina by the author of this book should write for information to: New California Subtropical Settlement, Postal Box 486, Joinville, Santa Catarina, Brazil.)

Migration from the Northern to the Southern Hemisphere may constitute mankind's last hope of survival when fallout becomes bad enough, as it is steadily becoming, even if no further nuclear explosions occur and it is predicted to become especially bad within the coming decade. This seems to be mankind's last hope of survival. As the giant mammoths of prehistoric times fled wouthward from the Arctic region with the coming of the Ice Age, so a new wouthward migration may be necessary to save mankind from extermination by radioactive fallout in the northern part of the planet.

A race that is so far ahead of us in scientific development and whose flying saucers are only one of their many superior inventions, is certainly in a position to help and save us and if our government leaders were wiser, more humble and less arrogant they would receive their ambassadors and be willing to learn from them and obey their admonitions, instead of willfully ignoring their existence even when the unprejudiced eyes of cameras prove it by photographs. These super scientists, whose researches in nuclear physics are thousands of years older than our own, certainly know much more about atomic energy than we do, as their flying saucers, empowered by a form of energy at their control, which is beyond aromic energy, prove. They should also know more about radioactive fallout, its danger and the means of its control than we do and might help us escape from the peril we ourselves created and save ourselves, if we have the humility and good sense to wish to do so. They hoped that we might learn from the how to save ourselves from the evil consequences of our own folly in poisoning the air we breathe, the foods we eat, the water we drink and the soil that yields our foods.

Scientists predict that radioactive fallout is scheduled to increase in intensity in the years to come and to become very bad in 1966 and the years to follow. As the air becomes increasingly more poisonous it might be necessary to adopt methods to protect ourselves from radioactively poisoned air by living within plastic enclosures in the form of semispheric domes placed over homes and buildings, with special air purifiers that purify the air that comes in from the outside, freeing it from its radioactive content. Also within these plastic enclosures foods will be grown in tanks of crush rock, irrigated by appropriate nutrient solutions, rather than using radioactively contaminated soil. Also in place of ordinary water, distilled water, whose radioactive poisons have been removed, would be used both for drinking purposes and for irrigating tank gardens. To protect itself against the radioactive fallout menace mankind may have to adopt a new way of living suited for the new environment, if it will insure its survival on this planet.

Chapter Four

AGHARTA, THE SUBTERRANEAN WORLD

Throughout the Buddhist world of the Far East, belief in the existence of a Subterranean World, which is given the name of Agharta, is universal and is an integral part of Buddhist faith. Another sacred word among Budhists is Shamballah, name of the subterranean world capital where is the golden palace of the King of the World. Roerich, who traveled extensively in Tibet, claimed that Lahasta, capital of this country, is connected by a tunnel with Shamballah; and that the Dalai Lama, who is his terrestrial representative, receives orders from the King of the World. The entrance to this tunnel is guarded by Lamas, who have sworn to keep its actual whereabouts a secret from outsiders by order of the Dalai Lama.

Buddhism is an Aghartan philosphy brought to surface humanity by teachers who came up from the Subterranean World; and the various gigantic statures of Buddha do not represent the human Gautama, but rather these subterranean supermen who came up to teach and help humanity at various times in the remote past. These Buddhas all taught the same universal, scientific religion as emissaries of Agharta the subterranean Paradise, which it is the goal of all true Buddhists to reach and for which yoga is the passkey and Royal Road. The yogas of India and the lamas of Tibet devote their lives to the single goal of preparing themselves to be qualified and worthy to enter the Subterranean World, while still alive, and not to go to an imaginary heaven after death. To be worthy to enter this superior world one must practice all the ethical rules of Buddhism, including such doctrines as vegetarianism, continence, universal compassion, etc.

Buddhists traditions state that Agharta was first colonized many thousands of years ago when a holy man led a tribe which disappeared underground. This reminds one of the Atlantean Noah who saved a group of his countrymen by bringing them to the Subterranean World before the coming of the Glood which sank Atlantis. The present population of this underground kingdom is believed to number many millions and these people are believed to possess a science superior to any found on the surface of the earth, through which they wield forces of nature we know nothing about and use them to operate their vehicles, including subterranean cars, which run at tremendous speed through tunnels, and their aircraft which we know as flying saucers, which navigate in interior atmosphere in the hollow center of the earth. Most of the human population of Agharta (for there are also superhuman inhabitants of Hyperborean, Lemurian and Atlantean origin) consist of Hindu yogis and Tibetan lamas, who gained admission as a result of lifelong persevering effort.

That these Aghartan Teachers or Buddhas came from the Subterranean World by flying saucer is indicated in the case of one such teacher - Quetzalcoatl, a tall, fair, bearded prophet who appeared among the Aztec and Mayan Indians of Mexico, Yucatan and Guatamala many centuries before the coming of the first white man. The Aztecs called him "God of Abundance" and the "Morning Star". His name Quetcalcoatl means "Feathered Serpen", meaning a teacher of wisdom (symbolized by the serpent) who flew (symbolized by the serpent being feathered). This meant that he came to these Indians on a flying saucer from the Subterranean World of Agharta through the North polar opening. Tradition says that he vanished (on a flying saucer and spent eight days in the Subterranean World (in the hollow interior of the Earth). He taught the Mayas identical doctrines of Aghartan philosophy as those taught by the Buddhas in Asia, including non-killing (vegetarianism and pacifism), continence, etc.

Quetzalcoatl is described as being "a man of good appearance and grave countenance, with a white skin and beard, and dressed in a long flowing white garment." He was called by some Quetzalcoatl and by other Huemac, because of his great goodness. He taught the Indians the way of virtue by his word and deed. He hoped to save them from vice and to give them laws and counsel and to restrain them from lust and to practice chastity. He instituted a vegetarian diet, with corn as a principal food, fasting and body hygiene. After remaining some time with the Indians, and seeing how little they cared to follow his higher doctrines - though they did follow his recommendation to plant and eat corn - he vanished, telling them that some day he would return again. Thus did this "visitor from Heaven" (the Subterranean World) leave the same way, returning to the Subterranean World from where he came through the north polar opening.

The Russian explorer, Ferdinand Ossendowski, author of "Beasts, Men and Gods", claims that the tunnels which encircle to the earth and which pass under the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, were built by men of a pre-glacial Hyperborean civilization which flourished in the polar region at a time when its climate was still tropical, a race of supermen possessing scientific powers of a superior order, and marvelous inventions, including tunnel-boring machines we know nothing about, by means of which they honeycombed the earth with tunnels. We shall now quote from Ossendowski's remarkable book relating his own experiences in Mongolia, where belief in the existence of the Subterranean World of Agharta, ruled by the King of the World, who resides in his holy city of Shamballah, is universal. Ossendewski writes:

"'Stop!', said my Mongol guide, when we crossed the plateau of Tzagen Luk, "Stop!"

"His camel bowed down without the need of his ordering it. The Mongol raised his hands in a gesture of adoration and repeated the sacred phrase:

"OM MANI PADME HUM!'

"The other Mongols immediately stopped their camels and began to pray.

"'What ahppened?', I wondered, bringing my camel to a halt.

"The Mongols prayed for some moments, then mounted their camels and rode on.

"Look, said the Mongol to me, 'how the camels move their ears with terror, how the manes of the horses remain immobile and alert and how the camels and cattle bow down to the ground. Note how the bird stop flying or the dogs barking. The air vibrates sweetly and one hears a song that penatrates to the hearts of all men, animals and birds. All living beings, seized with fear, prostrate themselves. For the King of the World, in his subterranean palace, is prophesy ing the future of the peoples of all the earth'

"Thus spoke the old Mongol.

"In Mongolia, with its terrible mountains and limitless plateaus was born a mystery which was preserved by the red and yellow lamas. The rulers of Lhasa and Ourga guarded this science and possessed these mysteries. It was during my trip to Central Asia that I heard for the first time this Mystery of Mysteries, to which I formerly paid no attention, but only did later, which I was able to analyze it and compare certain testimonies frequently subjected to controversay. The old men on the border of Amyil told me an old legend, according to which a Mongolian tribe, seeking to escape from Genghis Khan, hid in a subterranean land. Later, near Nogan Lake, I was shown by Soyota a door which served as the entrance to the kingdom of Agharta. It was through this door that a hunter entered into this region and, after he returned told of his visit. The lamas cut off his tongue to prevent him from speaking about the Mystery of Mysteries. In his old age, he returned to the entrance of the cavern and disappeared into the Subterranean World, which memory always brought emotion to the nomad.

"I obtained more detailed information from Houtouktou Jelyl Djamsrap de Narabanch Kure. He told me the history of the arrival of the all-powerful King of the World to the door of exit of the Subterranean World, his appearance, his miracles and prophecies. I then commenced to understand this legend, this hypothesis, this collective vision, which, no matter how we interprete it, conceals not only a mystery but a real force which governs and influences the course of the political life of Asia. From that moment, I commenced my investigations. The lama Gelong, favorite of Prince Choultoun Beyli, gave me a description of the Subterranean World.

"More than six thousand years ago, he said, a holyman disappeared into the earth accompanied by a tribe of people and never returned to its surface. This inner world was also visited by various other men, as Cakya-Muni, Undur-Ghengen Paspa, Baber and others. No one knows where they found the entrance. Some say it was in Afghanistan, others say it was in India.

"All inhabitants of this region are protected against evil, and no crime exists within its boundaries. Science developed tranquility, uninterrupted by war and free from the spirit of destruction. Consequently the subterranean people were able to achieve a much higher degree of wisdom. They compose a vast empire with millions of inhabitants governed by the King of the World. He masters all the forces of nature, can read what is within the souls of all, and in the great book of destiny. Invisibly he rules over eight hundred million human beings, all willing to execute his orders.

"All the subterranean passages in the entire world lead to the World of Agharta. The lamas say that all the subterranean cavities in America are inhabited by this people. The inhabitants of submerged prehistoric continents (Lemuria and Atlantis) found refuge and continued to live in the Subterranean World.

"The lama Turgut, who made the trip from Ourga to Pekin with me, gave me further details: The capital of Agharta (Shamballah) is surrounded by villas where live the Holy Sages. It remains one of Lhasa, where the temple of the Dalai Lama rises on top of a mountain surrounded by temples and monasteries. His palace is surrounded by the palaces of the Gurus, who control the visible and invisible forces of the earth, from its interior to the sky, and are lords of life and death. If our crazy humanity will continue its wars, they may come to the surface and transform it into a desert. They can dry the oceans, transform continents into seas and cause the dissapearance of mountains. In strange vehicles, unknown above, they travel at unbelievable speed through tunnels inside the earth. The lamas found vestiges of these men in all parts and in inscriptions on rocks; and saw remains of the wheels of their vehicles.

"When I asked him to tell me how many persons visited Agharta, the lama answered "A great number, but most of those who were there maintain the secret as long as they live. When the Olets destroyed Lhasa, one of their regiments, in the mountains of the southwest, reached the limits of Agharta and were then instructed in mysterious sciences, for which reason the Olets and Talmuts became prophets. Certain black tribes of the east also entered Agharta and continued to live there for centuries. Later they were expulsed from the Subterranean World and returned to live on the surface of the earth, bringing with them knowledge of the mystery of prophecy by means of cards and reading the lines of the hand. (They were the ancestors of the gypsies.) In a certain region in the north of Asia there exists a tribe which is on the verge of disappearing and which frequents the caverns of Agharta. Its members can invoke the spirits of dead which live in space.

"The lama then remained silent some time and then, respounding to my thoughts, continued: 'In Agharta, the sages write on stone tablets all the sciences of our planet and of other worlds. The Chinese Buddhist sages know that well. Their science is the most advanced and purest. In each century the sages of China unite in a secret place near the sea and on the backs of a hundred large turtles that come out of the ocean they write the conclusions of the divine science of their century.

"This brings to my mind a story that was realted to me by an old Chinese attendant in the Temple of Heaven in Pekin. He old me that turtles live for three thousand years without air or food and for this reason all the columns of the blue temple of Heaven rest on the backs of living turtles, so that wooden supports would not rot.

"Many times did the rules of Ourga and Lhasa sent ambassadors to the King of the World, said the lama librarian, but they could not reach him. However, a Tibetan chief, after a battle with the Olets, came to a cavern whose opening bore the following inscription:

THIS DOOR LEADS TO AGHARTA"

From the cavern left a man of beautiful appearance, who presented to him a Golden tablet bearing strange inscriptions, saying:

"The King of the World will appear to all men when comes the time of the war of the good against the evil; but this time has not yet come. The worst members of the human race have yet to be born.

"Chang Chun Ungern sent young Prince Pouzig as an ambassador to the King of the World. The ambassador returned with a letter for the Dalai Lama of Lhasa. He wished to send him a second time but the young ambassador never returned."

It was from the study of Buddhist writings on Agharta that Professor Henrique de Souza, archeologist and esotericist, learned about the existence of the Subterranean World. We quote from an article of his entitled "Does Ahangrilla Exist?", wcich shows that belief in the Subterranean World was a universal article of faith of all races of mankind:

"Does Shangrilla exist?

"Among all races of mankind, back to the dawn of time, there existed a tradition concerning the existence of a Sacred Land or Terrestrial Paradise, where the highest ideals of humanity were living realities. This concept is found in the most ancient writings and traditions of the peoples of Europe, Asia Minor, China, India, Egypt and the Americas. This Sacred Land, it is said, can be known only to persons who are worthy, pure and innocent, for which reason it constitutes the central theme of the dreams of childhoo.

"The road that leads to this Blessed Land, this Invisible World, this Esoteric and Occult Domain, constitutes the central quest and master key of all mystery teachings and systems of initiation of the past, present and future. This magic key is the 'Open Sesame' that unlocks the door to a new and marvelous world. The old Rosicrucians designated it by the French word VITRIOL, which is a' combination of the seven first letters of the sentence: "VISTA INTERIORA TERRAE RECTIFICANDO INVENIES OMNIA LAPIDEM", to indicate that "in the interior of the earth is hidden the true MYSTERY". The path that leads to this Hidden World is the way of Initiation.

"In ancient Greece, in the Mysteries of Delphos and Eleusis, this Heavenly Land was referred to as Mount Olympus and the Elysian Fields. Also in the earliest Vedic times, it was called by various names, such as Ratnasanu (peak of the precious stone), Hermadri (mountain of gold) and Mount Neru, home of the gods the Olympus of the Hindus. Symbolically, the peark of this sacred mountain is the sky, its middle portion on the earth and its base in the Subterranean World. The Scandinavian Eddas also mention this celestial city, which was the subterranean Land of Asar of the peoples of Mesopotania. It was the Land of Amenti of the sacred Book of the Dead of the ancient Egyptians. It was the City of Seven Petals of Vishnu, or the City of the Seven Kings of Edom or Eden of Judaic tradition. In other words, it was the Terrestrial Paradise.

"In all Asia Minor, not only in the past but also today, there exists a belief in the existence of a City of Mystery full of marvels, which is known as SHAMBALLAH (Shamb-Allah), where is the Temple of the Gods. It is also the Erdemi of the Tibetans and Mongols.

"The Persians call it Alberdi or Aryana, land of their ancestors. The Hebrews called it Canaan and the Mexicans Tula or Tulan, while the Aztecs called it Maya-Pan. The Spanish Conquerors who came to America believed in the existence of such a city and organized many expeditions to find it, calling it El Dorado, or City of Gold. They probably learned about it from the aborigenes who called it by the name of Manoa or City Whose King Wears Clothing of Gold.

"By the Celts, this holy land was known as "Land of the Mysteries" - Dust or Dananda. A chinese tradition speaks of Land of Chivin or the City of a Dozen Serpents. It is the Subterranean World, which lies at the roots of heaven. It is the Land of Calcas, Calcis or Kalki, the famous Colchida for which the Argonauts sought when they set out in search of the Golden Fleece.

"In the Middle Ages, it was referred to as the Isle of Avalon, where the Knights of the Round Table, under the leadership of King Arthur and under the guidance of the magician Merlin, went in search of the Holy Grail, symbol of obedience, justice and immortality. When King Arthur was seriously wounded in a battle, he requested his companion Belvedere to depart on a boat to the confines of the earth, with the following words: "Farewell, my friend and companion Belvedere, and go to the Land where it never rains, where there is no sickness and where nobody dies." This is the Land of Immortality or Agharta, the Subterranean World. This land is the Walhalla of the Germans, the Monte Salvat of the Knights of the Holy Grail, the Utopia of Thomas More, the City of the Sun of Campanella, the Shangri-la of Tibet and Agharta of the Buddhist world."

Chapter Five

THE ENIGMA OF ATLANTIS

To understand the true nature of the flying saucers and their origin, it is necessary to know something about the history of Atlantis, since it is the opinion of Huguenin that flying saucers are nothing other than Atlantean aircraft which, before the occurrence of the catastrophe that destroyed Atlantis, were brought to the Subterranean World in the hollow interior of the earth. After they left the outer atmosphere they flew in the inner atmosphere, acting as the chief mode of travel in this inner concave world where the shortest distance between two points on its surface is a straight air line best traversed by means of flying saucers. This may explain why, in Bulwer Lytton's description of the Subterranean World in his "The Coming Race", these people were described as doing most of their traveling through the air in order to go from one part of their concave world to another, These Atlantean air vehicles were called "vimanas". Today we call them flying saucers.

Before Atlantis sank, a certain group of foreseeing and wiser Atlanteans migrated to the Subterranean World of Agharta for safety, traveling there by flying suacer through the North Polar opening. Ever since then these aircraft confined their traveling to the interior atmosphere and only rarely ventured into the outer atmosphere. It was only after the Hiroshima atomic explosion when they were ordered to return to it for the purpose of protecting this interior atmosphere from radioactive poisoning that would result if atomic explosions were permitted to continue.

Atlantis perished as the result of a terrific catastrophe that caused it to convulse and sink, as vast tidal waves swept over it. Harold Wilkins believes that this was precipitated by a radioactive catastrophe, probably caused by a nuclear war, the legendary War of the Titans, which let to the earth shifting on its axis and bringing on a world deluge. Radioactive poisoning of the air caused the Atlanteans to seek refugs underground, taking their aircraft (flying saucers) with them. References to this Atlantean catastrophe and resulting radioactive poisoning of the air, which caused the Atlanteans to seek refuge in the Subterranean World and to establish cities therein and continue to live there, will be found in Wilkins' books, "Mysteries of Ancient South America" and "Lost Cities of Old South America."

In the light of the above as we understand the reason why the mysterious tunnels that underly South America were built, as well as the subterranean cities to which they lead. It is probable that the Atlantean cities in the Amazonas and in Matto Grosso were built prior to the time when the Atlanteans became preoccupied about possibility of a flood and the radioactive contamination of the atmosphere, which certain more advanced groups foresaw, and accordingly constructed these tunnels and subterranean cities for their protection and to insure their survival.

The question now arrises: How did this suviving group of Atlanteans save themselves: by traveling by flying saucers to the hollow interior of the Earth through the North Polar opening or by entering tunnels that led to subterranean cities under South America, most of which now exist under the states of Santa Catarina and Parana, Brazil. We cannot be too sure of the right answer of this question and all we can say is that they probably escaped in both ways. The Incas, for example, when they suddenly disappeared prior to the coming of Pizarro, which they foresaw, probably by their clairvoyant powers, undoubtedly did so by means of tunnels leading to underground cities, where they carried much of their gold, for such tunnels are known to exist in Peru inside the Andes and to run down to Chile.

According to Plato's account, the continent of Atlantis, which once existed in the Atlantic Ocean, was as submerged by a series of inundations which termined about 12,500 years ago. It was the home of a race of supermen or gods, who were its rulers, and a race of men, who were the ancestors of the Caucasian or Ayran race, a tall, fair, bearded race. On the other hand, the Pacific continent of Lemuria, which sank 25,000 years ago, was the motherland of the Mongolian races of eastern Asia, the Polynesian race and of certain Indian races of Central and South America, such as the Quichua Indians of the Andes, who are remarkably similar to Tibetans.

The gods and goddesses of Greek and Norse mythology, as pointed out by Donnely, were really kings and queens of Atlantis, race memories of whom were preserved by various emigrant races from this common motherland of western races in the form of the figures of their mythologies, who were in many cases identical, as were Odin and Zeus, the king of the gods, who were the rulers of Atlantis, who lived on top of a mountain in its center, later called Mount Olymphus by the Greeks and Mitgard by the Norse, who called Atlantis Asgard.

Wilkins believes that Atlantis was destroyed as a result of a radioactive as well as geological catastrophe which caused survivors to seek safety in the Subteranean World. The god Thor hurling his thunderbolts across the sky probably represented the "death rays" that the Atlanteans wielded and by which they final war, known to mythology as the "War of the Titans", was fought, which led to a sudden release of tremendous amounts of radioactive energy, which increased the temperat ure of the atmosphere, melting the polar ice caps and bringing on the flood that destroyed Atlantis.

Prior to the occurrence of this catastrophe, a certain group of pacifistic Atlanteans who did not care to engage in this war or be destroyed by it escaped to the Subterranean World, where they continued to live ever since. In this way, the Atlanteans split up into two groups; those who escaped to the Subterranean World and so preserved themselves from adverse conditions on the surface, and those races which continued to live on the surface and to degenerate as a result of such adverse conditions of exposure to solar radioactivity, causing their skin to darken (as happened in the case of the black tribes of Africa), this torrid a flesh diet in place of the fruit diet, of Atlantis, etc.

The gods of supermen all went to the Subterranean World and abandoned the earth's surface. The buddhas of the Far East were such subterranean gods. So was osiris believed by the ancient Egyptians to be a subterranean god. The existence of these subterranean gods or supermen and the possibility of contacting them was the central secret of the Ancient Mysteries. But with the coming of Christianity, the Mystery Schools were destroyed and priests taught their followers to believe that subterranean inhabitants were devils to be avoided and the subterranean supermen, people were taught to look up to an imaginary supernatural God in the sky for guidance. As an result contact between the Subterranean World and surface humanity, preserved for centuries by the Mysteries, was gradually destroyed and the existence of the Subterranean World became unknown to humanity on the Earth's surface.

It was not until 1945, when the mass visitation of flying saucers occurred, that contact between the Subterranean World and the surface was again reestablished, after being cut off for so many centuries. Rather than being space ships as formerly supposed, they were really the "viranas" of the Atlanteans, or Atlantean aircraft which now for the first time in thousands of years have come back in such great numbers into our atmosphere, where they once freely flew before the outbreak of the great war and flood that destroyed Atlantis, when they escaped to the interior atmosphere of the hollow interior of the Earth, where they remained ever since.

Chapter Six

THE MYSTERIOUS TUNNELS AND SUBTERRANEAN CITIES OF SOUTH AMERICA

"The Empire of Agharta extends, through subterranean tunnels, to all parts of the world", says Ossendewski, the greatest authority on the Subterranean World, who, in his book from which we quoted, speaks of a vast network of tunnels constructed by a prehistoric race of remotest antiquity, under both the oceans and continents of the earth, through which swift-moving vehicles pass. He writes:

"All the subterranean caverns of America are inhabited by an ancient people who disappeared from the world. These people and the subterranean regions where they dwell are under the supreme authority of the King of the World. Both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans were once the home of vast continents which later became submerged; and their inhabitants found refuge in the Subterranean World. The profounder caverns and illuminated by a resplendant light that permits the growing of cereals and other vegetables, and gives the inhabitants a long life-span free from disease. In this world exists a large population and many tribes.

It is claimed that the earth is honeycombed with a network of tunnels, which are especially abundant in South America; and that these tunnels lead to subterranean cities in immense cavities in the earth. Most famous of these tunnels is the "Roadway of the Incas: which is said to stretch for several hundreds of miles south of Lima, Peru, via Cuzco., Tiahuanaco and the Three Peaks, going on to the Atacambo Desert, where all traces of it is lost. Another branch runs to Brazil, where it is connected by tunnels to the coast. Here the tunnels go under the bottom of the ocean in the direction of the lost Atlantis. In this way Atlantis once had direct connection with its Peruvian colony in the Andes, through tunnels that run under the Atlantic Ocean and then under Brazil, passing through Panama and Santa Catarina to Matto Grosso and then on to Peru. They then ran down the Andes to Chile. Madame Blavatsky wrote about this Andean tunnel which opened at Africa, in northern Chile.

It is claimed that the Incas used these tunnels to escape from the Spanish conquerors and the clutches of the Inquisition, when entire armies made their way therein. They also carried their gold and treasures there when the Spaniards came. Their entrances were kept secret. It is calaimed that when Atahualpa, the last of the free Incas, was brutally murdered by Pizarro, the gold that was being carried to pay his ransom on a train of 11,000 pack llames, found refuge in these tunnels. It is claimed that these tunnels had some form of artificial lighting and were built by the race that constructed Tiahuanaco long before the first Inca had appeared on the scene.

These mysterious tunnels exist in greatest number under Brazil, where they form a regular network, with openings to the surface at various points. The most famous of these openings is in the Roncador Mountains of Matto Grosso, to where Colonel Fawcett was heading when last seen. It is claimed by some that the Atlantean city which he sought was really subterranean, and that he entered it and was held captive, so as not to endanger its inhabitants by later being forced to reveal its whereabouts, and that this explains his mysterious disappearance.

The Roncador tunnel opening is guarded by fierce Chavantes Indians who kill anyone who dares to enter uninvited and molest the subterranean dwellers whom they regard as gods, or at least so reverence. The Bat Indians, known as the Murcegos, also guard these secret tunnel openings leading to subterranean cities. We quote from Carl Huni who conducted a special study of this subject during his residence in Matto Grosso:

"The entrance to the caverns is guarded by the Bat Indians, who are a dark-skinned, undersized race of great physical strength. Their sense of smell is more developed than that of the best of blood hounds. Even if they approve of you and let you enter the caverns, I am afraid you will be lost to the present world, because they guard the secret very carefully and may not let those who enter leave.

"The Bat Indians live in caves too and go out at night into the surrounding jungles, but they have no contact with the real people down in the caverns below, who form a community by themselves and have a considerable population. People believe the subterranean cities they inhabit descended from the Atlanteans, who originally constructed them. While this is problematical, one thing is sure, that they compose a self-contained community where no atomic radiation can penetrate. These people may live in these ancient Atlantean subterranean cities which they usurped, but no one knows for sure. The name of the mountain range where these subterranean Atlantean cities exist is Roncador in northeast Matto Grosso. If you go in quest of these caverns, take your life in your own hands as you never be heard of again, like Fawcett.

"When I was in Brazil I heard a lot about the underground caverns and cities. It is however a long way from Cuiaba. It is near the river Araguaya, which empties into the Amazon. It is to the northeast of Cuiaba at the foot of a tremendously long mountain range named Roncador. I desisted to investigate further because I heard that they jealously guard the entrance to the tunnels from people who are not sufficiently developed, because they do not want any trouble. In the first place, they do not want anybody who is still enmeshed in commercialism and has a desire for money.

"I know that a good part of the immigrants who helped in the uprising of General Isidoro Lopez back in 1928 disappeared into these mountains and were never seen again. It was under the reign of Dr. Benavides who bombarded Sao Paulo for four weeks. Finally they made a truce for three days and let the 4000 troops, who were mainly Germans and Hungarians, go out of town. About 3000 of them went to the Acre in the northwestern part of Brazil and about 3000 of them went to the Acre in the northwestern part of Brazil and about 1000 disappeared into the caverns. I heard the story consistently. If I remember it was at the wouthern end of Bananal Island (near Roncador Mountains).

"There are also caverns in Asia and many Tibetan travelers mention them. But as far as I know, in Brazil are the biggest ones and they exist at three different levels. I am sure I would get admission if I ever wanted to join them because I have detached myself from all commercial aims, and they would take me as one of their's. I know they use no money at all, and the whole thing is organized on a strictly democratic basis. People do not become aged and live in everlasting h armony.

Many Brazilian students of the occult share with the wife of Colonel Fawcett and belief that he is still living with his son Jack as residents of a subterranean city whose entrance is through a tunnel in the Roncador Mountain range of northeast Matto Grosso where he was heading when last seen, after leaving Cuiaba, Matto Grosso. The writer met in Guiaba a native who claimed that his father was Fawcett's guide and who offered to take him to a certain opening leading to the Subterranean World in the region of Roncador, which would indicate that Fawcett's guide believed in the existence of subterranean cities and brought Fawcett to one, where he as held prisoner lest he reveal the secret of its whereabouts, which he might be forced to do on h is return, whether he wished to or not.

We have already mentioned the two books of Harold Wilkins, one of the few South American archeologist who pays attention to the mysterious tunnels under South America which he claimed were built by Atlanteans as a refuge from the Flood. This is indicated by the fact that the openings of these tunnels are usually found on mountain peaks, above the level of floodwaters.

There are persistent rumors among older residents of Santa Catarina concerning the existence of a subterranean race. There are also rumors about subterranean vehicles that travel through tunnels connecting each subterranean city with the other, similar to what Ossendewski report - that he heard in the Far East. One such rumor refers to an Indian who claimed that when he wished to travel great distances, he entered a tunnel and was conveyed there in a flash by a subterranean vehicle, traveling in this way from Santos on the coast of Brazil to Chile in a matter of minutes. According to another rumor, a Brazilian who entered a subterranean city was conveyed from there. He also said he saw a vertical tunnel with an elevator going straight down to the hollow center of the earth. What truth there is in these rumors the writer cannot say. In most cases they may have been fabricated by pretenders, who, knowing of the writer's interest in this subject, sought to obtain money from him.

Much more authentic is the report told the writer when he visited the Theosophists at Sao Lourenze that there is found there the grave of one of their members who traveled all the way from Peru to Brazil by means of tunnels. Also it is claimed that in slave days, runaway slaves entered a tunnel at Ponte Grosse, Parana, and traveled to Matto Grosso under the ground, later returning by the same route after slavery was abolished. It is also claimed that there are tunnels connecting Matto Grosso and Peru. This tunnel network runs to the coast of Brazil and then the tunnels go under the bed of the ocean in the direction of the site of the vanished Atlantis, indicating that the Atlanteans had direct communications with th eir Brazilian and Peruvian colonies by means of these tunnels which they constructed by boring machines they possessed.

It is claimed that Brazil was once an Atlantean colony. A late report states that an Atlantean city, with elaborate buildings, streets, etc., was found in the midst of the jungles of the Amazon. Also the Brazilian radio and press reported the discovery of a subterranean city by a group of scientists who entered a tunnel which opened on top of a mountain near the boundary of Parana and Santa Catarina, and descended until they came to a subterranean city. A strange fright came over the party, and instead of studying it, they fled. What did they see? Probably the inhabitants of this subterranean city.

Two ranchers living near the border of Parana and Santa Catarina came to the writer claiming they entered a tunnel there and traveled three days, finally descending and coming to an illuminated city in which they saw man, women and children. A member of their party got frightened and so they all returned.

A tunnel that opens at the base of a pyramid in Egypt is claimed to go on in the direction of South Africa for a distance of 900 kilometers and another tunnel that opened on the west coast of Africa was claimed to go underwater to the site of the vanished Atlantis, as indicated by the remains of vehicles found there. It is also claimed by subterranean vehicle to another city, claimed to be the capitol of the network of subterranean cities, It is also claimed that a tunnel connected the subterranean chambers of the Pyramid of Gizeh with Atlantis. It is probable that the gigantic statues believed to be of early Egyptian kings were really Atlantean gods or supermen dwelling in the Subterranean World, with whom the early Egyptian kings were in contact. A tunnel connected with the subterranean chambers of the Pyramid of Gizeh connected Atlantis with its Egyptian colony, and it was through this tunnel that the god-kings of Atlantis appeared among the Egyptians in their immense temples, since they were gigantic in stature as represented in ancient Egyptian statues of these kings, who were really kiings of Atlantis and not of Egypt.

That Egyptians knew about tunnels connecting the secret chambers of their pyramids with Atlantis is indicated by the Egyptian "Book of the Dead", where it says: "I am the offspring of yesterday (Atlantis); the tunnels of the earth have given me birth." Also: "It is I who carry away thy night, that I may come and seize upon the tunnels of Ra." Osiris was a subterranean god who ruled the Underworld, where the Atlanteans found refuge from the flood that destroyed their motherland. Those who were foreseeing enought to escape in time survived in their new subterranean hom, while the rest perished.

We have already referred to the theory of Harold Wilkins that the Atlanteans fought a war which poisoned the stmosphere with radioactivity and brought on the Flood; and that before its outbreak a network of suboceanic and subterranean tunnels was built connecting Atlantis with subterranean cities in South America, where Atlanteans found refuge from the catastrophe that destroyed their continent and where they continued to live. There is evidence that either the Atlanteans themselves or the ir descendants till live in subterranean cities under Brazil; and some claim to have contacted them by entering tunnels that are so plentiful, especially in the states of Santa Catarina and Parana, in South Brazil.

Thus there exist at two different levels of the earth's surface two different races, a superior subterranean race and an inferior, degenerate surface race which has been injured by exposure to the radioactive rays of the sun, harmful cosmic rays, improper diet, chemical poisoning, etc. The former regard the latter as "mechanized barbarians" whom it would be dangerous to inform of their existence or the way to reach them, for which reason the existence of the Subterranean World and the means to reach it has always been one of the most closely guarded of all secrets.

There is still another reason for secrecy besides the danger of invasion by gold-seekers and militarists seeking world domination by acquiring the scientific secrets of a super race. It is that when radioactive pollution of the atmosphere some day reaches and surpasses the level of tolerance, endangering human survival by causing asphyxiation, frantic people would see in these tunnels their last hope of saving their lives and would make every effort to locate them and get into them as quickly as possible. If they entered, the Subterranean Paradise would be overrun by wild, frantic, sick and crazed people. But more probably, so many would want to enter, that the entry would be blocked by the corpses of those who congested the tunnel entrances and fought with each other to get inside first.

Let us say a few words about the much publicized "Shaver Mystery", namely, the existence of underground dwellers found in caverns in the United States, reported to be monstrous, degenerate and evil creatures, who are natural enemies of mankind. Shaver claims to have been held a prisoner by these "Dero" people. Their origin may be explained as follows. Just as Lemuria was the place of origin of prehistoric apes and lemurs, who were degenerate men, so other degenerates were expulsed from the motherland and found refuge in caverns in the western part of the United States, who are the "Dero" of Shaver.

On the other hand, such Lemurian degenerates are not found in the tunnels and subterranean cities of Santa Catarina and Parana, Brazil, colonized by Atlanteans.

While the writer has no proof that they are true, the following are the rumors circulating in Brazil about alleged subterranean cities claimed to have been discovered, where dwell a strange race, probably descendants of the Atlanteans:

1. They are illuminated by a strange light which promotes the growth of trees and plants.

2. They are Gardens of Eden in which grow huge grapes and many other kinds of fruits on which these people live exclusively.

3. There are men, women and children. The women and children live apart from the men.

4. The men have long beards and long hair. The hair of the women is longer. These people enjoy unusual health, since they live in a world free from fallout.

5. These people use no money, Neither do they have to labor. They live in a paradisical life free from worry. There is no exploitation, so scarcity, no conflict, no disharmony among them. There is perfect freedom. Nor is there any crime. They live in a state of perfect continence, with no marriage. The women not only live apart from the men but produce children without need of male fertilization.

6. These people compose a super race whose members never grow old and never die, but live for centuries in a state of youth, in fact for thousands of years.

A man came to us today and said he entered a subterranean city some distance from Paranagua, in South Brazil. It was illuminated and had much fruits - including huge clusters of grapes, a strange fruit not known on the surface, apples and other fruits, which compose the sole diet of the people. The sexes live apart. He said he entered a subterranean vehicle operated by a strange motive power, which spiralled down until it brought him to the hollow interior of the world, where he beheld the central sun and tall godlike beings (Atlanteans), After visiting this "New World", he returned to the city. Later he traveled by vehicle through a tunnel to another subterranean city over a hundred miles away and passed through the door leading to it, inside of a tunnel, to the entrance of the tunnel, where he found a waterfall of warm water falling in front of it. This was near Iguassu Falls, on the Paraguay border.

Another Brazilian came to the writer saying he traveled through a smooth-cut, illuminated tunnel for three days, 20 hours a day, accompanied by two subterranean men he met at its entrance, until he came to an immense illuminated space filled with buildings and fruit orchard and where lived man, women and children, also various animals, including lions and tigers, who were as tame as cats and dogs. The sexes lived apart and the women all looked as if in their teens, even though some were centuries old. Also these people were all an exact copy og each other, with no individual variation. Women produced children by parthenogenesis, and were all virgin mothers.

One of the children ran over to him apparently unafraid and when tried to pick it up (which is forbidden among these people) an avalanche of rocks fell upon him, but did not harm him, leading him to believe they were really projected images rather than real rocks. He escaped to the outside through an exit tunnel. There he met a man who told him he often visited this city, where he was well received, and rode on a subterranean vehicle from it to other cities.

The illuminating central tunnel that led to this city was connected by about fifty or more radiating side tunnels to other subterranean cities in various parts of Brazil.

Regarding this and previous Brazilian reports, thie writer cannot guarantee that they are true, since the persons who made them had in most cases impelled by monetary motives. However, in the main they agree with each other regarding (1) these subterranean cities being illuminated (2) inhabited by a super race, (3) connected with each other by a network of tunnels.

Where there is smoke there is fire, and while these reports may be fictitious, there is absolute certainty that subterranean people exist here due to certain tunnels which positively exist in which the voices of men were heard, which the writer hopes to investigate.

Chapter Seven

THE PARADISICAL UTOPIS IN THE HOLLOW INTERIOR OF THE EARTH

The Subterranean World in the hollow center of the earth has a perfect subtropical climate, well ventilated, never hot and never cold. There is perpetual daylight there, due to illumination by the central sun which, being smaller than our sun, is less powerful and its radiations do not cause sunburn and are more agreeable, being free from harmful infra-red and radioactive rays of our sun and free from sunspots. There are no storms or other meteorological disturbances there; and the weather is always perfect, without variations of temperature as we have.

There is never excessive rain to erode and leach the soil. The air is constantly renewed by fresh cool air coming in through the North Polar opening.

Agharta, the name of the Subterranean World, composes a world empire, all parts of which are in direct contact with the others by flying saucers which travel in a direct line between different parts of this concave world. In place of different nations as we have here, each with its own government, often at war with that of other nations, Agharta is a single empire with a world government whose seat is its capital city, known as Shamballah, where is the golden palace of the King of the World.

In Agharta are extensive fruit orchards, since its population are fruitarians. Many strange fruits unknown on the surface are grown there. Fruits are concentrated into pills, which supply maximum nourishment with minimum of digestive effort or excretion, thus saving physiological energy other wise wasted in the handling of bulky foods and liquids. With excretions reduced to the minimum there is also optimal conservation of hormones otherwise lost with them.

In order to protect their atmosphere from radioactive contamination, subterranean people have air purifiers which resemble rotating radar detectors, which draw in radioactive substances from the air by a process of suction. These are then concentrated into a mass and decontaminated by chemical treatment, after which they are deposited as inert waste.

The population of Agharta consists of two main divisions - a race of gods or supermen, coming from the prehistoric continents of Hyperborea, Lemura and Atlantis, and a race of men. Most of the latter are Mongolians and Tibetans, since the life of Tibet, unlike that of the West, is founded on achieving an escape from this world and entering the better one that exists in the interior of the world. There are many small brown-skinned men there who are the ancestors of the Eskimos. There are comparatively few Westerners; and these are the great masters of past history, who, by gaining entrance to the Subterranean World, were able to prolong their lives. One of these Apollonius of Tyana, the historical Christ of the first century, who, when 108 years of age, came to India, where he lived until the age of 890 years, searching ceaseless for an entrance to the Subterranean World, which he later found in Mount Sinai when he was 904 years of age.

The subterranean people are vastly ahead of us in science and invention, flying saucers are only one of their many achievements. Marcoux, director of the Subsurface Research Center at Phoenix, Arizona, speaks of the "telesoltdgraph s", wh ich are projected machines the project images in natural three-demensional form, so real that they cannot be told from the original. In this way a person can project a three dimensional image of himself to other persons at a distance, and can communicate with him, appearing just as if he was before him. Regarding the air-purifying machines of these people, which free their air from radioactive substances, Marcoux says:

"This is a "sweep rau", which literally 'sweeps' the atmosphere of all radioactive elements. Most of them are mobile and have a fan-like antenna, and are designed like a spider well, which draws in the radioactive particles from the air and processes them th rough filters, which remove all substances harmful to life."

Marcoux claims that these machines not only remove poisons from the air but add to it health-giving substances that have a beneficial effect both on vegetable and human life breathing such air. Marcoux records the following message received from a subterranean dweller named Lanto:

"Foods used here are of an entirely different variety than you are accustomed to. A white and red grape is common here and is purer than the blue. Melon meats are made into a juice which helps to stimulate the mind and make it more receptive to beneficial thought currents. Bathing is done in natural steam waters which exist here, and after the bath an oil made from roses, flowers and olives is rubbed into the skin to invigorate it and produce a texture of smooth softness. Our living quarters and conference rooms are something which you have never seen or imagined. Our libraries are filled with books and tapes which only certain ones are allowed to use, for reasons known only to us. We know who can or cannot handle the knowledge contained in them.

"Our children are taught very little, but what they learn is acquired in less time than what your children take years to accumulate, and is all learned by the time they reach seven years.

"Our machines and methods of teaching make for a way of life which requires little effort or labor; and when you are much wiser in our ways you will be prepared for the task of establishing a colony in or close to our domain. He prepared to understand an undertaking which will be beneficial and necessary both to yourself as an individual and to the social whole as a 'grouped individual'.

"People in your world consume too much unnecessary food to gratify a perverted sense of taste and too many relishes without realizing that they are slowly destroying themselves by what they eat and drink. We have a clear beverage, somewhat milky in color, which we drink, which relaxes and opens the pores and nerve centers. We drink a water of the utmost purification.

"We are an energetic race, loving peace and contentment. There are many nights when we reach out and teach you while you sleep, for we have our ways to communicate at various levels and distances. We also have our means of travel by self-propulsion, and not by means of vehicles such as yours.

"What we do in our world for provisions, labor, enjoyment, pleasure and wearing apparels will be explained later, when you are finally permitted to 'enter'. Rustic furnishing will be found in our worked for durability and less attentive care. Our outward appearances are of a youthful vigorous nature, though we can also appear as of ancient age as an expression of the time element difference between our two worlds. (Marcoux's note: "It is not hard to conceive the idea of an indefinite life span. Many surface scientists have considered this possibility, and some claim man could live at least 500 years if he would control his living habits. However, it may be difficult for the layman to believe in the possibility of such prolonged life spans as the subterranean people possess as a result of their unique scientific way of living.")

"The first ones to return to us through certain entrances which they will be shown will act as leaders who will bring others to us. The cooperation of certain individuals is essential, for this is not a world of material lusts or grafts, nor is it like your world of continuous strife and the struggle for survival."

"For people to attempt to enter our world without reaching the proper level of intelligence, health and knowledge of our ways would be near death to them. The air, temperature and our foods are all different from what you are accustomed to, Our foods are grown without the deteriorating effects of solar rays. Our clothing, speech and our system of government, as well as our mental concepts, are as different from yours as day from night.

"Speech is of little use among us, and is seldom resorted to, and we regard it as a useless waste of muscle power, and is replaced by a positive knowingness without the actual vocal sounds. Surface people use their muscles in so many useless exertions that it is really silly. We do have our leaders, who work in unison with the others, and all live together without greed or selfish envy.

"The fact that surface races are becoming more interested in and aware of our existence is very gratifying. We are only sorry that we cannot at this time grant permission to all of you to enter our domain. Those of you who are chosen to enter the realms of the subterranean existence should feel fortunate, grateful and much wiser, without regrets of the life left behind. Past sufferings were pitfalls of experiences that you had to encounter, but never get discouraged, knowing that deep within you lie these truths which you are to bring forth to the surface world, namely the actual facts and reality that we, the "Subterranean Races" do exist."

The above communication was delivered to Marcoux by a Subterranean Teacher and dictated to a tape recorder on November 26, 1959. Marcoux sent it to the writer for publication.

The subterranean people need very little, for with a diet of fruit vitamin pills fruit juices (when liquids are desired) and fresh fruits, life is quite simplified and they do not have to spend their time laboring for money and be economic slaves as we are. There is no exploitation among these people, and no class distinction between rich and poor, or between workers and those who parasitically live off the labor of others.

Industrial production is reduced to the production of flying saucers, projection machines, air purifiers and such products of social value.

The sexes live apart in Agharta, each economically independent and free. Marriage does not exist, nor do women depend on men for their support, since the fruit orchards are common property and provide food for all. Children are raised collectively and live together in dormitories under the care of qualified teachers. Since all reproduction is parthenogenetic and since sexual reproduction does not exist, children have no fathers. The virgin-born children are female, since the female is considered the normal and perfect sex in the matriarchal civilization ruled by the Great Mother, who is recognized as the Supreme Being in place of false male gods.

The inhabitants of Agharta, living under optimal biological conditions, approximate to the pure Nordic type, being blonde, fair-skinned and blue-eyes. The blonde races are those who more recently left the Subterranean World and lived for the least time under the unfavorable conditions of solar radioactivity, soil depletion and wrong diet on the earth's surface, while the races that were exposed for the longest period of time to the harmful rays of the sun and general unfavorable effects of life on the earth's surface turned darker, and under the tropical sun, turned black. (The deposit of pigment in the skin represents the body's effort to protect internal organs from the detrimental action of solar radiations by forming a protective covering in the skin, in the form of dark pigment.) Similarly the hair turns black and the eyes brown. All races, including negroes, were originally blonde and blue-eyed, as infants tend to be at birth. It was unfavorable environmental conditions that turned the original fair Nordic type dark, as occurs under the unfavorable conditions of the tropical climate.

There is no old age in Agharta and no death. It is a society in which everyone is young looking, even if many hundred of years or thousands of years old.

This seems incredible to surface dwellers exposed to the harmful effects of solar radiation and autointoxication from a wrong diet. Old age and conditions which are not the natural result of the passage of time nor an assumed aging process. Since Aghartans are free from all disease, due to their diet consisting chiefly of fruit juice and fruit vitamin pills, so they are free from the universal disease of senility, which causes surface races to have such short lives, growing old and dying before Aghartans reach maturity.

It is claimed that the essential purpose of Tibetan lamaseries is to prepare and train recruits for the Subterranean World, abandoning all wordly attachments; and Hindu yogis have the same goal. Hense most of the inhabitants of Agharta are Tibetan lamas or yogis and few Westerners ever reach there. They live in the delusion of a "heaven" that is to be reached only after they die, rather than go to heaven, they become food for worms. Heaven, or Agharta, must be reached while alive and entered physically if at all.

How do Tibetans and Hindu yogis reach Agharta? By flying saucers through the north polar opening of through tunnels as Ossendewski claims?

The superior scientific culture of the subterranean people, of which their flying saucers are the most evident example, is due to the fact that their vital energies flow up to their brain and are not idssipated through the sexual channel as among so-called "civilized" surface races. In fact, sex is completely out of their lives because, on their fruit vitamin pill diet, their endocrines are in a state of perfect balance as among innocent children, without any food stimulation of any glands causing hyperactivity, as is the case with those on a h igh protein diet, composed of meat, eggs and other animal proteins who suffer sexual superexcitation as a result. This loss of lecithin, horomones, phosphorus, calcium and other vital essentials, and brings on premature endocrine degeneration, old age and early death. Use of other asphrodisiacs, as coffee, tea, salt, tobacco and alcohol hasten this degenerative process.

As a result of their diet and harmonious endocrine state, these people have no matrimonial problems or losses of brain vitality through sexual indulgence to interfere with the progress of their scientific development and inventions, which are thousands of years ahead of our s. They are a race of pacifists, unlike us, whose history was a series of intermittend wars which caused civilization to periodically retrogress as fast as it made a little advance. Their freedom from the drawbacks of sex and war enabled these people to make their astounding scientific progress. Since their brain energy was not continually drained through gonadal activity, as is the case among us, their scientists were able to vastly surpass our own, as shown by the superiority of their aircraft, which we call flying saucers, over ours. They are a disease-free race.

In a place of sectarian religious of false man-gods competing with each other and encouraging their followers to engage in never-ending senseless religious wars and perecutions, all people of Agharta, in all parts of their world, obey one Supreme Being, the Great Mother, who is their Original Ancestress and the biological progenitor of all members of the mammalian family. The World Government of Agharta in its capital city of Shamballah functions under Her Supreme Direction.

The ancient statues of gigantic early Egyptian kings, as well as the immense stones of Buddhas in India, represent Hyperborean Rulers of Agharta, a race of divine beings who are above sex differentiation and are virgin mothers. It is probable that the prehistoric Egyptians and inhabitants of India had contact with them through tunnels traversed by swift-moving vehicles.

Chapter Eight

PROPHECIES OF THE FUTURE OF MANKIND

(1960 - 1965)

It is claimed to be impossible to exactly specify the date of future events because of the fact that Subterranean People, by means of their projecting machines, and able to send out radiations that act on the human brain and influence our thinking and behavior. Especially when a catastrophe threatens that might endanger their own welfare and existence, such as the outbreak of a nuclear war, they project powerful radiations attuned to the brain wave length of government leaders and thus prevent calamities that might otherwise occur. Through their superior inventions they can control us as if we were chessmen. In view of these facts we cannot be sure that the prophecies given below are correct. We believe these prophecies indicate GENERAL TENDENCIES and POSSIBILITIES but that the events they refer to will probably not occur on the dates indicated. This is probably true of Dr. Bianco's prophecy given below.

DR. BIANCO'S PROPHECY OF A RADIACTIVE CATASTROPHE AND GLOBAL DELUGE ON JUNE 14, 1960

An Italian medical man, Dr. Elio Bianco, of Milan, founded with a number of associates a "Community of the Elect" on Mount Blanc to prepare for world destruction which he said would occur on July 14, 1960, according to a prophetic communication uttered by his dying 27 year old daughter. She said on this date a new super bomb would explode that would destroy the human race, producing first terrible radioactive fallout, to be followed by a flood. She said this catastrophe would exterminate the human race except for 5000 familes who will be gathered to a place of safety and be saved. They will be the nucleus of a new race.

So certain did Dr. Bianco feel about the truth of this prophecy that he gave up his medical practice and settled with a number of followers on the snowy heights of Mount Blanc awaiting the end of the human race. But while he may be safe there against flood he will not be safe from the burning up of the atmosphere and from radioactive fallout, the only refuge from which is by entering the Subterranean World. The catastrophe of Dr. Bianco feared will probably not occur at the date he expected it to.

MARCOUX'S PROPHECY OF A FLOOD OF FIRE FOLLOWED BY A FLOOD OF WATER

In case nuclear tests are resumed by the major nations, there is danger that the human race will be exterminated, dur to the accumulation of carbor 14 in the air, which will make it more combustible, until the atmosphere will become ignited and burn. This is the view of Charles A. Marcoux of Subsurface Research Center in Phoenix, Arizona, a subterranean investigator who has searched for 20 years for an entrance to the Subterranean World, during which he secured contact with certain subterranean beings. He writes:

"About the fire that will sweep the earth, I am not predicting that such will be the case, but only hint that it may be the case. The following are my views on the subject. The molecules of air are becoming 'mutated' by radiations. both solar and atomic. The reason why this mutation is taking place is because the 'vitality globules' are being eaten up by radiation, the neutron attacking the carbon staff of life, making the molecule vulnerable to ignition and so causing the air to catch on fire. Let me explain.

"In Williamson's recent lecture tour in the United States, he mentioned the fact that electronic particles in the air are rapidly being depleted by radioactive fallout, making ti subject to spontaneously catching on fire, and that science has been aware of this fact for some time. In one town where he had made this statement in a lecture, a woman in the audience mentioned to him that she knew this to be a fact, since her brother was in Washington doing some kind of research for the government about this condition. This woman gave Williamson the name and address of her brother and of the foundation where he was conducting his research. So Wiloiamson sent a letter to this person, and requested information about this condition and mentioned the name of the woman who recommended him to communicate.

"Williamson received a letter back from this person, and he claimed to be doing research on 'forest preservation', and went on to say that it was vitally important for such conservation, but disclaimed any knowledge of studing such affects of fallout in causing spontaneous combustion of the atmosphere, causing forest fires, due to effects on electronic particles in RESEARCH, or something to this effect. This made Williamson ask, "Would Radiology have to do with forestry, or the preservation of the forests'. Williamson, like his audience to whom he mentioned this, could not make any connection between the two, and laughed it off as some joke that the government was trying to play.

"Animal life breathes oxygen and gives off carbon dioxide, and plant life inhales carbon dioxide and replaces it with the magnetic vitality necessary for animal life to exist, giving off oxygen. Both plant and animal worlds cannot exist without the other. Now without this vital energy in the air which the ancients called 'vitality globules' (and which science now calls free electrons), the air we breathe does notgive us the proper amount of regenerated magnetism, which comes from plant life, and especially from TREES, since their tremendous size and age produce great amounts of regenerated globules necessary to animal life. When animal life does not receive the proper quantity, it cannot return to plant life the necessary carbon dioxide.

"Now radioactive fallout is known to cause atmospheric nitrogen to be replaced by carbon 14, which is accumulating in the air in abnormally high amounts, With the vitality globules in the molecules of air being replafed by carbon 14, th is increases the possibility for neutrons to attack the carbon and the result is RADIOACTIVE FIRE. This is what will happen to the air particles as fallout increases. They will IGNITE from the bombardment of the neutrons, as happens to the uranium pile in the cyclotron when the neutrons are left free to attack it. And this explains "ALL THE FIREBALLS WHICH ARE PLAGUING THE WORLD."

"If the Flood of Fire comes, and I am sure that it will, then this fire will eventually RELEASE THE POLAR ICE CAPS at both North and South Poles, which will deluge the world with a superabundance of water. The melting of the ice will give the world a new supply of purified oxygen, and the water will wash the soil clean of all radioactive impurities that have settled in it as a result of fallout. The release of the polar ice caps will cause the earth to shift on its axis at least 90 degrees. The fires are with us today and are an everyday threat of our survival."

"I am aware of the radioactive conditions and its potential increase and dangers to occur within the next ten to fifteen years. I have been working for and looking forward to the uniting of a group to colonize, to somewhat save a remnant, so to speak. I know that mankind cannot survive on the earth's surface and must eventually go underground. Some believe that saucers will take them off the earth when that time comes, but my evidence on this matter proves to me that this is not possible, no more so now than it was when the Elder Gods fled Lemuria. Therefore mankind will eventually have to go underground, but it will not be able to do so unless guided by Beings of a superior knowledge and race, with whom I am in contact.

"According to Heffling, the last time that the earth was faced with the same problem which we today face, the Gods (of Lemuria and Atlantis) burrowed into Mother Earth and established underworld or subsurface kingdoms, and their remains can still be found there, along with their children. The same thing will have to be done today by present mankind in order to survive.

"While there is evidence of beings that exist below the surface that are not cordial or beneficial to surface races, or even subsurface races, there is more evidence that there exist beneficial Beings in the Wlder World than the opposite; and many secret places exist where they contribute to surface races' mental and spiritual advancement. Few surface persons are ever allowed inside except when special consideration is given to such individuals, after they have achieved a state of selfless service and a desire to do justice towards their fellowmen.

"The Subterranean World is underlaid with a network of tunnels that exist from Canada to South America, and especially under Brazil, which are connected by tunnels with other parts of the world. The tunnel network that concerns me is the one than opens at various points in Central and South America, with its "Entrance in one of the Superstitious Mountains of Arizona."

In view of the certain destruction of mankind due to progressive radioactive poisoning of the atmosphere, due to past nuclear explosions even if no future ones occur, and which process will be hastened if they do, and will finish its work of destruction rapidly in event of a nuclear war, Marcoux claims that entry into the Subterranean World is our only salvation, and he is working to establish a colony of potential survivors to prepare them for subterranean living. He says:

"My purpose is to start a colony and gather a group of people who can give up the outside world and start a new life, one that will not be easy, but better than that which they left behind. That is the purpose of my entering the Subterranean World, where THOSE WHO EXIST THERE will direct me what to do. I make NO PROMISES to anyone - each has his life in h is own hands. I will do as THEY (the Higher Beings) direct me. I am a very cautious person. I go into the mountains tomorrow for twenty-four hours. I have been aon a strict diet for the past week to condition me for the trip."

MAYITA'S PROPHECY OF THE DESTRUCTION OF MANKIND THROUGH A NUCLEAR WAR, A FLOOD OF FIRE AND A FLOOD OF WATER

Mayita is a clairvoyant seeress who lives in Puerto Rico. She has an unusual capacity to behold visions of future events, wh ich usually come to pass as she beholds them. Like the Oracles of old, her body becomes a vehicle through which a Goddess, who calls herself the Great Mother, speaks. The writer studied Mayita for nearly two years and is convinced of her genuineness. Long before anything was published about the radioactive poisoning of foods, the Great Mother delivered a prophecy that foods were to become more and more poisoned during the years to come and by 1965 would contain so much of this new poison in them that it would be impossible to eat any foods without being poisoned. Only later did newspapers publish reports about strontium 90.

In one of her premonitory visions, Hayita beheld the outbreak of a future world war and saw plainly the figures 1 - 9 - 6- 5 as the date when this catastrophe would occur. She saw the Russians send a SUPER BOMB to the United States, which was so powerful that a single blast exterminated every living being from Atlantic to Pacific. Mayita begged the writer not to talk about this vision so as not to frighten people unduly. But she affirmed positively that such a mass annihilation would occur. This gives our civilization only five more years to survive.

She said that Russian scientists learned how to make this bomb from a race whose scientific dvelopment surpassed our own - namely those who came on flying saucers, whom the Russians befriended and learned from. This bomb had three potencies, the most powerful potency being capable of global annihilation, which, or course, the Russians did not want to use; and so they exploded the bomb of lowest potency, capable of destroying most of the North American continent.

The explosion of the Superbomb led to terrestrial and atmospheric fires, and the resulting smoke covered the earth and prevented the sun's rays from reaching it, resulting in perpetual night. The bewildered survivors groped in the darkness for food and water, since electric power lines were destroyed. Between these series of events and their culmination, when the heated atmosphere causes polar ice caps to melt and bring on a global deluge, a mass landing of flying saucers, bearing NUCLEAR AGE SAVIORS, occurred, for the purpose of rescuing those worthy of being saved, which was done in total darkness. In the midst of the chaos and turmoil, Mayita saw the rescuers single out certain individuals by virtue of the Light in the Center of their Brain (the phosphorescent glow of the pineal gland), which is an index of the individual's grade of spiritual development. Only those with this inner brain glow were considered fit to survive, and the rest were left to perish as the raging tidal waves swept over the parched land surface of the earth, cleansing it of radioactive contamination.

Mayita said that during the next few years, every person, by his acts, will determine whether he will belong to the surviving group or be left o perish with the rest. There will be a sifting of the wheat from the chaff. Those who follow the teachings of the Great Mother, who control their appetites, eat sparingly, abstain from meat and animal foods, and conserve their physiological phosphorus for the internal feeding of their pineal gland through continence and conservation of sexual energy, will qualify themselves for survival, whereas those who are addicted to alimentary and sexual indulgences, causing the phosphorescent glow of their pineal gland to be dim, will be left to perish. It will be a question of the survival of the spiritually and physically and fit. Those who achieve mastery over their passions and possess glowing, vital pineal glands, perceptible to the NUCLEAR AGE SAVIORS in total darkness, will be saved. It is this inner light in the brain which will be one air ticket to a saucer ride to the Subterranean World inside the Earth, enabling one to live on after every living creature on the earth's surface will be destroyed. But even more important than purification, potential survivors must cultivate the qualities of compassion, unselfishness and humanitarianism. They must practice kindness and helpfulness to others during the time that remains. Simply to hold a selfish desire to save oneself through practicing vegetarianism and continence is not enough. Godness and mercy to the less fortunate should radiate from them, so they should manifest a similar attitude of helpfulness and service towards their fellows.

The Russians claim to have a cobalt bomb, which seems to be the type of superbomb whose explosion destroyed the United States, according to Mayita's vision. In event of a nuclear war there will be a strong temptation for combattants to liquidate the enemy as quickly as possible and so incapacitate him to retaliate, which would cause them to explode the most powerful bomb at their command, rather than a less powerful one that would permit the enemy to strike back. For in a nuclear war, it will be the nation that strikes the fastest and with the most powerful bomb that will win. It will be based on the idea, "He who strikes first strikes last."

Mayita's premonitory vision of the destruction of the human race in 1965 therefore involved the following events: first the explosion of a superbomb, then the burning up of the atmosphere through a Blood of Fire and then a Flood of Water as the heated atmosphere melted the polar ice caps, leading to a global deluge and the extermination of all life. The only land areas to project above the risen waters were the wind-swept heights of the Andes. But the radioactive contamination of the air was so bad that even those who found refuge there could not survive.

But while life will be exterminated on the earth's surface by 1985, it will continue in the Subterranean World, which is protected against radioactivity and flood. Some 12,500 years ago, survivors from a similar catastrophe which destroyed Atlantis found refuge here, where they continued to live. If Mayita's prophecy is correct, then it is of utmost importance during the few years that remain to find the entrance to the Subterranean World and establish residence there. Naturally not all persons will be permitted to enter. Those who are vegetarians who lead pure and good lives will alone be qualified. Only in this way can a remnant of the human race survive the universal destruction which Mayita foresees will occur in 1965.

But according to Genesio, a Brazilian seer, while 1965 will mark the date of final destruction, it will really be the climax of a series of calamities which will commence in 1960 and proceed step by step until total destruction occurs. We shall refer to Genesio's prophecy below.

LAVAGININI'S PROPHECY OF NUCLEAR WORLD WAR IN 1965

Aldo Lavaginini is undoubtedly one of the world's foremost scientific astrologers or cosmobiologists. He has mathematically arrived at an identical conclusion as Mayita did through extra-sensory perception, namely that 1965 will be the date of the outbreak of World War 111.

ZELRUN KARALEIGH'S PROPHECY

In the middle of 1959 he beheld a vision in which he saw a Flood of Fire sweep the earth due to the burning up of the atmosphere, so that the earth was enveloped in flames. He said that "space ghosts" (probably subterranean people coming on flying saucers, who used the usual alibi that they came from other planets) told him that this calamity would occur in 1960.

GENERAL HOLDRIDGE'S PROPHECY

General Holdridge, on the basis of purely sociological considerations, has made a prophecy of the collapse of the present financial and economical system, which would bring on mass starvation, revolution and civil war, which would increase the peril of a nuclear world war. Speaking of the WORST ECONOMIC DISASTER IN HISTORY, whose coming he foresees as a result of causes now in operation, he says:

"Past history reveals few situations of potential disaster equal to our present 'mess'. The floods that wiped out the world of Noah's day, the slow fall of the Roman Empire consumated over several centuries, the sudden burial of the Italian city of Pompeii under the lava of erupting Mt. Vesuvius, and the French Revolution WERE OVERSHADOWED BY POTENTIALITIES AS DIRE AS THOSE PREDICTED FOR ARMEGEDDON."

Skyrocketing inflation, mounting unemployment, the devaluation of money, increasing competition of other countries taking away our diminishing foreign markets by underselling us, especially communist countries who can produce for less due to a lower standard of living than Americans are accustomed to, all conspire, says General Holdridge, to 'pull our economic rug from under our feet, render us incapable of paying our foreign obligations, close down our industries, create mass unemployment and give a knock-out blow to our entire economy. The unemployed workers, most of them trained in the use of arms in our armed forces, angered by hunger and illness of the ir families, would soon learn how easy it would be to smash plate glass windows of giant food markets and strip the shelves of supplies, which would never be restocked.

"Hunger, disease and civil war would become epidemic, complicated by the viciousness of religious wars and the rising of the colored population. The armed forces would lay down their arms and refuse to shoot down staving fellow-citizens, victims of economic and political outlaws. Those responsible for this criminal situation would start running to flee from the wrath to come ... And there we have a super-duper 'Reign of Terror' completely spelled out. He who runs may read. Ignore the warning at your peril!"

WILL 1960 WITNESS THE WORST DEPRESSION IN HISTORY?

It is well known that there is a regulat 10-11 year sunspot cycle of depressions and wars, governing economic and financial conditions in the United States which ha s continued with perfect regularity for over a century. During the nineteenth century it manifested in a series of periodic financial panics at intervals of a decade apart, but, starting in 1914, a series of world wars were purposely started by staged "incidents" in order to avert economic crises that would otherwise have occured and so prolong the life of an obsolete economic system doomed for a final crack-up, like a dying person whose life was prolonged by drug injections. Let us review this cycle:

1833 to 1883: A series of five regular financial panics, terminating in the bad panic of 1883. These commenced with the beginning of the Industrial Era early in this century and resulted from accompanying unemployment crises as the development of machinery displaced human labor.

1893: Financial panic and economic crisis.

1903: Financial panic and economic crisis.

1914: World War 1 starts to prevent an economic crisis due to German competition to England and the United States in world markets.

1919: World War 1 over. The war shifted the cycle forward five years; and it now continues from this date onward.

1929: The Great Depression followed by the Bank Crash. Hunger, breadlines and WFA.

1939: World War 11 starts to prevent a new world economic crisis that was looming. In 1941, when the United States entered the war, there were 13 million unemployed in our country. Draft and was industries swallowed them up and saved the economic situation.

1950: Another depression on its way, which Truman stopped by starting the Korean War. This created an artificial war arnament business boom.

1960: A new bad depression on its way, predicted to be the 'Last Depression' wince it will lead to complete collapse of the present economic system - unless a third world war is started to prevent it. However, the trouble with starting a new world war as a preventive of economic diseaster, as was successfully done in 1914 and 1939, is that the discovery of the hydrogen bomb has changed the picture and makes it certain that such a war would destroy the victor as well as the loser, so that only a madman could start it. The big danger, however, is that madman might seize the reigns of government and plunge the world to destruction.

NUCLEAR WORLD WAR 111

In spite of prevailing world peace, many Americans live in constant dread of the coming of a nuclear world war. While nobody wants such a war and everyone dreads it, we know that millionaires will jump off the top of skyscrapers when some of their millions are lost, and that when a new terrible depression brings a nation on the verge of economic collapse, revolution and civil war, frantic government leaders might try to save themselves, as they have done so many times before, by creating an artificial war situation, which would cause their people to rally in their support, and forget their internal troubles by diverting their attention to a new foreign danger.

In this way, the war nobody wants and everyone fears - Nuclear World War 111 - may come upon us like a thief in the night. We quote from a review in "Time" magazine entitled "World's End", dealing with the book, "On the Beach", which describes how a group of Americans found refuge from mass suicide resulting from the outbreak of a nuclear world war by migrating to the lower part of the Southern Hemisphere:

> "Massive cobalt bombs obliterated the inductrial cities of East and West. The winds carried radioactive dust to hamlet and farm, from Scandinavian fiord to Pacific Island. A vast silence fell over the Northern Hemisphere."

The book then goes on to describe how a group of Americans had the good sense and foresight to leave the radioactively contminated Northern Hemisphere in time and get deep into the Southern Hemisphere before the rest of their countrymen were killed by radiation or asphyxiated by radioactive fallout poisoning the atmosphere. They settled on an island in the South Pacific far down below the equator. In this way they saved their lives from the catastrophe that killed every living being in the Northern Hemisphere.

According to the Anderson report, published by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, entitled "Fallout from Nuclear Weapon Tests" (Summary Analysis of Hearings May 5 - 8, 1959, the Southern Hemisphere has much less fallout than the Northern, while at 26 degrees south latitude the strontium 90 reading of stratospheric radioactive contamination is lower than any other place on earth except the Antarctic. Also the reading of soil contamination by strontium 90 is very much lower here than in the Northern Hemisphere and less than in most of the rest of the Southern Hemisphere.

The garden city of Joinville in Santa Catarina, Brazil, is located at about 26 degrees south latitude. Due to a delicious subtropical climate in this area and the fact that it is in the World's Radioactive Safety Zone, since fallout is greater both norht and south of this point, because both hemispheres show peak fallout values at 40 - 50 degrees latitudes, the writer has come here and is working to establish here a settlement of Americans who seek to insure their survival during the perilous days that lie ahead. All persons interested in this settlement project should write to: New California Subtropical Settlement, Postal Box 485, Joinville, Santa Catarina, Brazil.

It is a fact of meteorology that winds carrying radioactive dust from the Northern Hemisphere, when they reach the equator, are met and opposed by contrary winds coming up from the south, causing them to rise and circle back in a northerly direction. This protects the Southern Hemisphere against wind-borne fallout from the Northern, which will be the part of the world where World War 111 will be fought. It is especially the lower part of the Southern Hemisphere, south of the Tropic of Capricorn, where there is maximum exposure to wind currents from the Antarctic (the region of the earth with least radioactivity) where the World's Radioactive Safety Zone exists. Here human life may continue after it is radioactively exterminated in the rest of the planet, as will be the case after nuclear World War 111 starts. To receive a chart prepared by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, Washington, D.C., showing why this World's Radioactive Safety Zone is at 26 degrees south latitude, where New California Subtropical Settlement project has been established, write to New California Subtropical Settlement, Postal Box 485, Joinville, Santa Catarina, Brazil.

PROPHECY OF THE KING OF THE WORLD

DELIVERED IN 1890

When Ossendowski visited his monastery in 1921, the Hutuktu of Narabanchi told him that the King of the World appeared before the lamas of this monastery thirty years ago and delivered the following prophecy, which probably referred to the coming nuclear world war and its aftermath, scheduled to occur in 1965, and to the coming of the subterranean people, who will be Nuclear Age Saviors:

"Every day men increasingly forget their souls and occupy themselves exclusively with their bodies. The most terrible corruption will reign on earth. Men will become like ferocious animals, thirsty for the blood of their fellows, engaging in perpetual warfare.

"The crowns of kings, great and small, will fall: one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight....There will be a terrible war between all the peoples of earth. The oceans will become red with blood. The earth and the bottom of the sea will be covered with skeletons. Empires will disintegrate; and entire nations will perish. Hunger, disease and crimes hitherto unknown will sweep through the world.

"There will be storms and tempests. The earth will tremble...Millions of men will change the slaves of slavery for the humiliation of hunger, disease and death. The highways will be congested with multitudes aimlessly wandering from place to place without any destination. The largest and best cities will disappear in flames. Father will battle against son, brother against brother and mother against daughter. Vice, crime and the destruction of bodies and souls will proceed unabated. Families will disperse. All fidelity and love will vanish. Of ten thousand men, only one will survive - insane, naked, hungry and without energy, who does not know how to build himself a house nor prepare his food. He will roam around like a ravenous wolf, devouring cadavers and biting into his own flesh in desperation.

"The earth will become depopulated. All that will remain will be night and death. Then will rise a new people until now unknow, who, with a strong arm, will uproot the weeds of insanity and vice and lead those who remain faithful to the human spirit to the battle against evil. They will found a new life on earth, purified by the death of all nations. The people of Agharta will then leave their subterranean cavern and will appear on the surface of the earth."

GENESIO'S PROPHECY OF WORLD WAR 111 IN 1965

Genesio of Joinville has received a prophecy that the years 1960 to 1965 will witness a series of calamities which will reach its climax in the latter year in the form of a new world war followed by a deluge.

These calamities will commence with the events which General Holdridge predicted, namely widespread unemployment, destitution, food storage, starvation and an economic crisis, which will lead to increasing unrest and outbreaks of violence, until things will come to a white heat, with danger of revolution and civil war. Step by step events will proceed toward the final catastrophe.

Since economic crisis and danger of revolution constitute the chief cause of war, since governments, which face collapse, always seek to maintain their existence by creating an artificial war danger and thus rally the support of their people against a foreign enemy, the war peril will increase to the extent that the economic situation aggravates and goes from bad to worse.

In this way, World War 111 will be forced upon us, causing the radioactive poisoning of the air, soil, foods and water supplies, exterminating the human race. Nuclear bomb explosions, through their fallout, will increase the temperature of the air, causing polar ice caps to melt and bringing on a world deluge.

These calamities says Genesio, will start in 1960 and will last for five years, during which we shall see mass starvation, revolutions and civil wars everywhere, until the mounting tension reaches a grand climax in the form of World War 111. Radioactive fallout will become lethal, especially in the Northern Hemisphere, and human survival will be possible only in the lower part of the Southern Hemisphere, which is the only continental land area so near to the Antarctic, the safest place on earth, but too cold to be livable. Radioactive food poisoning, the burning up of the atmosphere and a world deluge are part of the resulting dismal picture that Genesio foresees.

Thus an Economic Catastrophe would lead to a military one, and this would lead to a Radioactive Catastrophe, terminating in a Deluge. Humanity's only salvation, says Genesio, is to find an entrance to the Subterranean World and to establish residence there. But only a few are qualified to enter, those who are "pure". Purity means first of all a clean, state of the intestinal tract which is best insured by a vegetarian diet. (Genesio, Holdriidge, Lavagini and Mayita are all vegetarians). During the few years that remain between 1960 and 1965, every individual will determine by his acts and mode of life whether he will survive or parish by 1965. Depending on the extent to which he prepares himself for survival by purifying his body and making himself qualified to enter a superior world inhabited by h igher beings will his future fate be determined.

AUGUSTINE'S PROPHECY OF THE EXTERMINATION OF MANKIND THROUGH A NUCLEAR WAR, A FLOOD OF FIRE AND A FLOOD OF WATER IN 1965

After this book was sent to the publisher, on Feb. 20, 1960, Augustine, one of the author's tunnel investigators, a young fellow in his early twenties, reeived a revelation as he stood on an upper porch of my hotel and gazed on the city of Joinville below. He saw the city razed to the ground and then covered with raging floodwaters, these calamities to be preceded by a nuclear world war - the bomb explosions causing atmospheric and terrestrial fires to sweep over the world and followed by a terrible deluge. In his mind came the date 1965.

He related this prophecy in the presence of the writer and Genesio, who had independently received an identical prophecy. Neither Genesio nor the writer had related this prophecy to Augustine, who claims he received it independently, though another subterranean investigator working for the writer, Iracledes, had some time ago received an identical prophecy of a Flood of Fire followed by a Flood of Water, but did not specify the date as Genesio and Augustine did.

Augustine said that he wishes to leave this mundane existence on the earth's surface, since the human race has only five more years to survive. He has already discovered two subterranean men in a tunnel on a mountain top near C.; and tomorrow Augustine and Genesio are going to enter this tunnel and try to reach the subterranean city from which the two men that Augustine saw came. Augustine wishes to establish residence with them, since he is convinced that by 1965, or before (through a series of wars that will start before and reach a grand climax in the form of a nuclear war in this year, which will exterminate humanity), every living being on the earth's surface will be destroyed. Humanity's only salvation he said, is to gain entrance to the Subterranean World where alone life may survive after it is no longer possible on the earth's surface due to radioactive poisoning and the coming deluge.

Where ther is smoke there is fire. Why do so many prophecies point to 1965 as the year of doom?

Chapter Nine

SURVIVAL IN THE NUCLEAR AGE

While migration from the Northern to the lower part of the Southern Hemisphere is the best way to insure survival, for those who cannot migrate the following recommendations are made:

NUCLEAR AGE HOMES. When the air becomes so heavily charged with radioactive dust as to cause asphyxiation and respiratory poisoning, it will be necessary to protect all dwellings by semispherical plastic domes, in which the air supply which enters from the outside has been purified by physical, chemical and electrical means. In this way those living inside these plastic domes will be enabled to breathe air whose radioactive dust content approximates to conditions as prevail in the Antarctic and at 26 degrees south latitude in the Southern Hemisphere, where stratospheric and atmospheric radioactive contamination is minimal

No soubt effective methods of freeing incoming air from radioactive dust will be developed when the need becomes imperative for human survival. Asiatic flu, which is really the first stage of mass poisoning by radioactive dust in the air, originated when a Russian hydrogen bomb explosion in Siberia caused a terrible fallout over Manchuria early in 1957 due to an error.

As winds carried the resulting radioactive dust around the world, Asiatic flu traveled with it. But as the concentration of radioactive dust in the air increases, its effects on the lungs and rest of the organism will become more and more dangerous, so that the milder symptoms of Asiatic flu - really a mild form of atmospheric radioactive poisoning - will assume more serious pathological manifestations.

It will then become necessary for inhabitants of the Northern Hemisphere to live within plastic enclosures, protecting them from direct contact with the radioactively poisoned atmosphere, and to wear certain gas masks, which purify the inspired air of radioactive particles, when they left the enclosure.

In addition to protection against poisoning by breathing of radioactively contaminated air, it will be necessary to adapt a new method of growing foods so th at they are free from strontium 90, which will finally become so high in concentration as to make all foods poisonous. To accomplish this, it will be necessary to raise foods in tanks of crushed rock instead of radioactively contaminated soil, within these plastic enclosures, so that plants may breathe purified air. These tanks will be irrigated by a nutrient solution of rock and seaweed minerals. The method thus resembles hydroponics except that no chemicals will be used, since minerals derived from rocks are much better for the production of healthful foods than from strong chemicals which really were origianlly derived from rocks but are too one-sided. Nor can any chemical formula equal the natural combination of major and trace minerals found in rocks.

As for seaweed, since it grows at the bottom of the ocean and is protected from fallout by miles of ocean water above, it constitutes one of the safest forms of nourishment both for plants and for humans and superior to that provided by fertilizers derived from animal or plant sources exposed to fallout. According to one estimate, the amount of strontium 90 in deep ocean seaweed is about 2 per cent of that in vegetation grown on open soil directly exposed to fallout, whose concentration in soils and foods steadily increases.

As for drinking water and water used for irrigating tank gardens, distilled water is best, especially when deep well water, not directly exposed to fallout is repeatedly distilled. In this way obnoxious radioactive minerals, as well as other harmful inorganic substances (at least unsuitable for the human consumer which lacks the capacity to convert inorganic into organic minerals as plants can) are removed.

There are many people who live in the fond hope that before any catastrophe occurs, a "spacelift" of flying saucers will descend and rescue them, even if they live in large cities. Taking to heart the saying, "God helps those who help themselves", they should realize the folly of such wishful thinking. Subterranean supermen have more to do than to worry about saving them by sending them one of their flying saucers in the nick of time, especially if they live in a city, where such rescue is impossible. Their first step to insure their future survival should be to leave cities and settle in the country, where alone saucer landings will be possible. And while they make the move, they may as well migrate to the lower part of the Southern Hemisphere, where in event they miscalculate and saucers do not come to rescue them, their lives may continue for a longer period than in the Northern Hemisphere, when the bomb explosions of World War 111 and resulting intense fallout will occur.

Marcoux, however, is convinced that our salvation will not occur by being picked up by saucer air taxis at our service. He thinks that we should not depend on others to save us but try to save ourselves by finding a tunnet entrance to the Subterranean World, where alone we sill find security in a World Free from Fallout. He has been searching for 20 years for such an extrance; and while he has not yet found it, he claims to have achieved contact with subterranean people. He is continuing his search, since he believes that finding such an entrance is humanity's last hope of survival.

Just as the giant mammoths of prehistoric times, on the coming of the Ice age which suddenly froze the then tropical Arctic zone, migrated southward to insure its survival, so inhabitants of the Northern Hemisphere may have to do the same, to save themselves from extermination by the new man-made Frankenstein of Radioactive Fallout, a Rain of Death from which now descends over the Northern Hemisphere, rendering it progressively more unfit for human habitation. A new migration should get under way from the Northern Hemisphere to the lower part of the Southern Hemisphere, the best part of which is the New Promised Land of Everlasting Spring and Tropical Fruits which the writer found in subtropical Santa Catarina in South Brazil after 26 years search for a Terrestrial Paradise in 25 countries of Latin America. Here he is establishing a settlement of American vegetarians, organic gardeners and advanced thinkers anxious to live in a part of the world where alone a New Age can arise, which is impossible in the radioactively contaminated Northern Hemisphere.

Those who are more forward-looking will be among the first pioneers of this coming migration from the Northern to the Southern Hemisphere. Parents devoted to their children's future welfare and those interested in the birthright of the unborn will make a sacrifice to do so, and to escape from the radioactive poisoning of their environment, especially since practically all foods available in the United States are now grown on radioactively contaminated soil and contain more and more radioactive poisons, while a late news dispatch says that drinking water is becoming "hot" with radioactivity all over the United States. As radioactive poisoning - through foods, water and air - becomes worse and worse throughout the Northern Hemisphere, vegetables, dairy products, wheat, etc.

constitute a greater and greater hazard to health, more and more wide-awake people will look to South America, and especially to Brazil, which Madame Blavatsky, when she visited it in the last century, claimed will be the home of the New Age and New Civilization, which will rise after the great nations of today fall and disappear.

When radioactive fallout and resulting air, food and water contamination reach and pass the danger point, as it has already done in the northern part of the United States more and more people will look forward to settling in South America, especially in Santa Catarina in South Brazil, which enjoys the best climate and conditions in general for the colonization of Americans, who will find here optimal opportunities for earning a living through small-scale agriculture, due to a great demand for fruits and vegetables in local markets.

While escaping fallout by a move from the Northern to the Southern Hemisphere, ultimate secuity will be assured only by gaining entry to the Subterranean World and establishing residence there. Since there is no place on earth where there exist more tunnel entrances to this world than in the states of Santa Cararina and Parana in South Brazil, this is an additional reason for settling here. Dr. G. M. writes that his subterranean contacts who visited him on a flying saucer told him that there are many openings to the Subterranean World around Joinville in Santa Catarina. While this area will provide a certain degree of protection against the heavier fallout of the Northern Hemisphere, only in the interior of the earth can one enjoy absolute protection, especially after the commencement of a nuclear world war which will so poison the air, soil, foods and drinking water as to make it impossible for the human race to survive any longer on the earth's surface.

Naturally, the subterranean people will be very careful whom they admit, and would take in only qualified persons and not everyone. If most people were suddenly brought to a world where animals are not killed for food and where they would have to become vegetarians immediately, since their accustomed animal foods, as meat, fowl, eggs and dairy products, do not exist here, many of then would be very unhappy, might even revolt and would make every effort to escape and return to this radioactive world, preferring to live a few years happily and enjoy their meat meals than live an eternity in a state of privation and dissatisfaction, if not growing hunger. They would be a nuisance to the subterranean people, and might even be dangerous to them. Certainly the former would have enough intelligence, based on their long life experience, not to make the mistake of admitting to their paradise persons not worthy to enjoy it and who would grumble, complain and be trouble-makers.

Also, we must consider the fact that in the Subterranean World the sexes live in separation, and absolute continence is the rule, all women being virgin mothers and not requiring the male for fertilization. This means that in addition to strict vegetarianism, those who enter the Subterranean World will also have to live in absolute continence. Naturally they should practice these rules prior to admission and not wait until the last moment and expect to suddenly adopt them after they enter. It is probable that the essential purpose of Tibetan lamaseries is to prepare candidates for entry to the Subterranean World, so that they may be qualified to live the New Life which prevails there. This is also the highest goal of true yogis.

FOR PROTECTION AGAINST STRONTIUM 90

Scientists are now experimenting with methods of counteracting the new poison now accumulating in our foods, soils, drinking water and air - strontium 90. A Japanese chemist, Dr. Ugai, just found such an antidote in tannic acid, which when added to the diet of mice, was found to lead to a marked reduction in the concentration of strontium 90 in their bones, as compared with controls which received no tannic acid. His explanation is that tannic acid combined with strontium 90 to form an insoluble compound which is eliminated rather than settling in the bones.

The writer found in Santa Catarina a unique food product which provides tannic acid in a safe form, combined with an abundance of organic calcium, which also protects one against the accumulation of strontium 90 in the bones, since in the presence of sufficient calcium, the bones imbibe it in place of strontium 90, which is eliminated. This food is Banana Meal, made from immature bananss, which have more tannic acid and calcium than ripe bananas.

For man yyears European pediatrists have added Banana Meal to the diet of undernourished and run-down children with astounding results. While the exact cause of its beneficial nutritional effects is yet undertain, its high content of readily assimilable, soluble organic calcium must partially explain it, as well as perhaps unknown constituents in the form of growth-producing plant hormones present in the immature bananas from which this meal is made.

Not only infants and children, but invalids and the aged have been greatly benefited by addition of Banana Meal to their diet; and while it has been so used prior to the Atomic Age, today, with increasing stronthium 90 food poisoning beccoming a Number One health problem, the fact that Banana Meal is the best dietary source of tannic acid and organic calcium makes its use as an adjuvant to the diet of great importance by its capacity to protect one against this new source of food poisoning. Sprinkling Banana Meal over one's foods and dissolving it is beverages for some weeks will convince one of its extremely beneficial effects.

Those who suffer from lack of calcium, an element which tends to be lacking in most modern foods (including pasteurized dairy products, since the pasteurization process converts calcium from an organic to an inorganic form, rendering it unavailable for body use), will find the addition of Banana Meal to their diet to be of utmost value and benefit to their health. Price of Banana Meal is 2 lbs. for $3.00, 4 lbs. for $5.00, 9 lbs. for $10.00 and 20 lbs. for $20.00. Postpaid, duty-free, and it may be obtained by writing to New California Subtropical Settlement, Postal Box 485, Joinville, Santa Catarina, Brazil. Organically grown dried bananas may also be obtained at the same price.* For protection against strontium 90 food intake, it is advisable to live on a fruitarian organic mono diet of dried bananas eaten with seeds or nuts, which will lead to much better health than a diet containing sprayed, strontium 90 containing foods.

* (1960 information; the publisher cannot guarantee its accuracy).

-0-